Priest Defends Athlete Accused by Girl at Altar

SATISFIED CHARGE IS FALSE, HE STATES

Bride Stricken After Scene in Church as Girl and Baby Face Rich Bridegroom

Waterbury, Ct., Nov. 19.—Rev. Luke Fitzsimmons, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, declared today that investigation had convinced him there was no foundation to the charge made by Miss Loretta Rodden at the wedding of Edward J. Farrington and Margaret Hodson in his church.

Miss Rodden threw the wedding party into an uproar when she declared the Yale athlete bridegroom, son of a wealthy banker, was the father of her baby.

It was because investigation had satisfied him that he went on with the wedding, Father Fitzsimmons explained.

The interruption was dramatic as the young girl arose with her baby in her arms and made the startling charge.

Father Fitzsimmons stated he had heard that the girl had threatened to "expose" Farrington at the wedding and, as a result had made his exhaustive investigation of the charges before the wedding.

He also declared that, although the child is nearly two years old, no attempt had been made by the girl to secure redress for the alleged wrong, and that no protest had been made by the girl when the banns were published in the church.

PAIR DEFY GIRL.

It was also learned today that the marriage of Farrington and Miss Hodson had been scheduled to take place about six months ago, but that it had been postponed because the Rodden girl threatened to make a public accusation at the wedding.

Finally it was decided by Farrington and Miss Hodson to go through with the marriage. The church was crowded with wealthy friends, and the ceremony was all but completed when Miss Rodden arose.

"I forbid this marriage," she cried.

Fifty-five thousand football fanatics, roused to feverish enthusiasm by the thrilling preliminary contests which have made this the greatest year the gridiron ever knew, stormed the Stadium today for the crowning event of a glorious season — Harvard versus Yale.

All roads led to Cambridge as the ancient varsity rivals met for the fortieth time to struggle for supremacy.

And for every man and woman who succeeded in storming the citadel, armed with the coveted tickets, ten others tarried unwillingly outside, bitterly disappointed.

Football's swift and sudden capture of the popular imagination was never better illustrated than today, nor was undergraduate enthusiasm ever more rampant.

Greater Boston was a divided camp as the hosts of the Blue and the hosts of the Crimson met.

HARVARD FIGHTING SPIRIT.

Eli's hordes came like an invading army, confident of victory, impatient of delay. But as the hour of issue approached the fighting spirit that has carried many a team to triumph over a powerful rival swept the Harvard undergraduate and graduate bodies and when the Crimson took the field it was to the roar of a Harvard host whose "will to win" seemed almost impossible to down.

Notwithstanding which, in the cold figures which the bettors wrote, Yale ruled a favorite.

From Boston's overcrowded hotels and lodging houses the thousands of visitors began pouring toward the Stadium long before the hour of the game. Roads were clogged with traffic at times, although the excellent arrangements of the police soon resulted in a restoration of order and

Warmest Nov. 19 Ever Recorded in This City

As Harvard and Yale athletes prepared to battle in the Stadium the official weather man announced that today was the hottest November 19 in the history of the Boston Weather Bureau.

The record was broken at 10 o'clock when the mercury climbed to 65. The highest previous temperature on this date was on November 19, 1906, when the mercury went to 64.

The hot weather today was accompanied by a high humidity, 95 per cent, being the official figures. No relief from the humidity was offered for today.

Tomorow rain is predicted in large quantities. Storm warn the coast from Hatteras to Eastport, Me.

Sunday night a sudden drop in temperature is predicted, and by Monday freezing temperatures are expected.

SCHOONER SUNK IN COLLISION OFF CAPE COD

Dozen Survivors of 4-Master Brought Into Boston on Oil Tanker David McKelvry

Badly damaged, the oil tanker David McKelvry, from Port Lobos, Mex., for Boston, steamed up the harbor today with the skipper and men of the four-masted schooner Sintram, which was rammed and sunk off Cape Cod in a dense fog late last night.

On board the tanker were Captain Edward J. Pierce of the Sintram and eleven members of his crew. No lives were lost in the collision.

Ill luck pursued the Sintram on her voyage here with 3,500 tons of coal for Boston dealers. Tuesday night, in a dense fog that shrouded all of Nantucket Sound, she piled high and dry aground Eighteen-Foot Hump. Wednesday the crew lightered part of her cargo and she floated at high tide and proceeded to Vineyard Haven, where she was repaired and took aboard the coal that had been removed.

Early yesterday she started for Boston, but late in the afternoon ran into a dense mist belt that covered the sea off Cape Cod.

It was while she was groping her way through this fog that the blunt bows of the tanker loomed up, and before either commanding officer could take steps to avoid the collision, had crashed down upon the schooner's port quarter, cutting to the water's edge and sinking her within half an hour.

The schooner's crew was removed to the tanker without difficulty as the sea was comparatively smooth.

The Sintram was built for the United States Shipping Board less than a year ago in Maine.

CHINA'S FATE DISCUSSED IN SECRET SESSION

3 KILLED BY B & M TRAIN

Mother and Two Children Lose Lives Walking on Tracks Near North Wilmington

Mrs. Alice Canse, forty years old, her two-year-old son, Leo, and her eleven-year-old daughter, Laura, were instantly killed today by a Boston & Maine local train about a mile south of the North Wilmington station.

When Mrs. Canse was last seen she was walking up the track toward the station, holding Leo in her arms and Laura by the hand.

The family lived on Pershing street in the Federal Grove section of Wilmington in the summertime. Henry Canse, the husband and father, works in Roxbury in the Winter, and it is supposed his little family was on the way to the station to take a train for Boston and join him for the season.

He collapsed when informed of the tragedy.

The tragedy was peculiar in that the engineer of the train which must have killed the mother and children was not aware of the accident and the bodies were found and the accident reported by Fred Smith, also a resident of Federal Grove and a neighbor of the Canses.

Railroad officials say that there was a heavy fog in the stretch of country south of North Wilmington early today and an engineer might easily enough have driven down the three and gone on, not in the least aware of what had happened.

There are sharp ledges arising on both sides of the track where the bodies were found, and it is believed, in the absence of any other knowledge, that Mrs. Canse and her small son and daughter were caught in the cleft, tried to squeeze against the sides of the ledge or climb out, and so were not struck head-on, but by the side of the locomotive.

Smith, who found the bodies, reported the accident to Station Agent Linwood Smith at North Wilmington.

The station agent agreed that mother and children were very probably walking the tracks to the station to take the 7:02 local for Boston, when they were struck by the local just ahead of it.

The Canses live at Federal Grove in the Summer and spend weekends there during the Fall and early Winter.

New York, Nov. 19.—Two bandits early today entered the office of the Stone & Webster Company, covered George Wentworth, the paymaster, with revolvers and escaped with two strong boxes containing the payroll of 50 men.

EGYPT REJECTS PEACE OFFERED BY BRITAIN

London, Nov. 19.—Adly Pasha, Egyptian Premier, today rejected the plan offered by Lord Curzon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, granting virtual independence to Egypt, while retaining to Great Britain the right to keep garrisons in the country to insure British communications with India. Adly Pasha threatened to break off the negotiations. Such action would probably result in his opponent, Zaghoul, leading a new revolution in Egypt.

BODY FOUND NEAR COMMONWEALTH PIER

The body of a man believed to be John E. Powers of No. 116 Chelsea street, Charlestown, who jumped from the Narrow Gauge ferryboat Dartmouth on October 11, was found today between the Fish Pier and Commonwealth Pier. The body was discovered by Charles Danielson of Princeton street, East Boston, and Felix Bodreau of London street, East Boston. The body was picked up by the police boat Guardian. Powers jumped from the ferryboat on the eve of October 11, when the boat was about seventy-five feet from the Boston shore.

DELEGATES OF BRITAIN REBUKED

"Hasty" Action in Objecting to U. S. Proposals Resented by Lloyd George

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 19.—China went on the witness stand before the powers today with Japan playing the role of cross-examiner.

The delegates of the nine powers went into secret session at the Pan-American Building at 11 o'clock to consider China's case. The Japanese delegation entered the conference without a definite program, it was stated officially, but prepared to make a general statement of Japanese policy towards China.

Japan's attitude was to be voiced by Baron Shidehara, the Japanese Ambassador, who speaks English with more fluency than his colleagues, Prince Tokugawa and Baron Kato.

LLOYD GEORGE ANGRY

The report that Premier Lloyd George has cabled the British delegation, severely censuring its action in entering objections to the American proposals prior to the objections interposed by Japan, although unconfirmed officially today, is, nevertheless, the cause of considerable speculation in diplomatic circles.

The report, which emanates from a high source, states that the British Premier rebuked the British delegates for acting too swiftly, after the conference convened, upon the "hasty advice" of one of the British high naval advisors.

Diplomatic observers, speculating upon the report, hold the belief that it was the Premier's plan to work in absolute accord with the Americans until such time as Japan should have entered its objections or proposals for modification of the American plan.

The specific purpose of this plan, the belief is held, was to prevent Japan from following British lead and force Japan to accept on its own initiative, whereupon, it is thought, Great Britain was to have aligned herself with the United States and

JAPS TO EXPOSE FRENCH AND BRITISH EXPLOITATION OF CHINA

RESENT BEING MADE 'GOAT' OF EASTERN PROBLEM

force Japan into a position where her cards would be on the table before the British had revealed theirs.

This, it is said, would have enabled the British and Americans to formulate a plan between them whereby Japan could be dictated to.

Japan's Plea for More Ships Refused

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.

Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 19.—The most important pronouncement of the conference since Secretary of State Hughes stated the American proposals for limitation of armament was contained in the flat assertion that the maximum ratio of tonnage allotted Great Britain, the United States and Japan must stand.

The statement was regarded as a direct reply to Admiral Baron Kato's suggestion that Japan would urge a modification of terms as regarding herself.

ASSOCIATION OF NATIONS.

Next in importance, President Harding said this afternoon that after an agreement is reached on Far Eastern policy by the nine nations now dealing with that problem the other nations of the world will be invited to ratify the action taken.

With this statement can be put what I know from an authoritative source, that the President still feels the obligation to carry out the promises he made to the thirty-one Republicans, of whom Mr. Hughes was one and Mr. Root another, to bring into being, in some form, sooner or later, an association of nations.

Other important developments were:

1—President Harding gave the clearest idea yet obtained as to the form any understanding reached at the conference may take. He said he did not believe any Congressional action would be required on an agreement in regards to naval armament. He added as his opinion, that Congress would be glad to give authority to the Executive to destroy ships whenever it became desirable, just as he now has authority to get rid of them when they are obsolete.

The President also said that no action by the Senate would be necessary on the Far Eastern agreement unless those agreements were embodied in a treaty. As the most favored plan is a series of identical notes, this may well mean that the Asiatic policy will not get to the Senate.

Another matter made clear at the White House was that the current discussion as to who should get the credit for the original idea did not interest the President. He does not care whether it is called the Harding idea, the Hughes idea or the American idea. All he wants is that it shall be successful.

BRIAND'S SPEECH MONDAY.

2—Announcement that the next plenary session of the conference should be held on Monday, November 21, beginning at 11 a. m. Premier Briand is expected to state the position of France on the question before the conference in what his associates expect to be one of the great oratorical efforts of his life.

3—A strong hint that Japan will ask for a special plenary session at which they can state their own view of just why China is in the pitiable predicament in which she finds herself.

4—Announcement that the Chinese delegation have drafted a plan for the creation of a permanent international concert of powers on Pacific questions. They will submit it to a committee on Far Eastern questions as soon as they are satisfied the American delegation would give favorable consideration to the plan.

5—Work of the conference for the day was confined to a meeting of the committee on armaments and the less important technical committees.

A conference was held at the State Department between Secretary Hughes and Arthur Balfour, who was accompanied by Admiral Lord Beatty. This three-sided talk lasted an hour and ten minutes, beginning at 4 o'clock, and is believed to have been devoted principally to the points of difference that have developed between the Hughes plan and British ideas on submarines, light cruisers and the ten-year holiday.

Shortly before this secret conference began, it was made plain in authoritative American quarters that every detail of the Hughes plan has been carefully thought out, and that all attempts to curtail the defensive value of the submarine from the viewpoint of the American requirements would be strongly resisted.

Simultaneously with the meeting at the State Department, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, Admiral Coontz and Captain W. C. Pratt met in conference at the Navy Department.

"LIBERAL" TO JAPAN.

The answer to Admiral Kato's statement regarding modifications desired by Japan was without qualification. It was explained that if the main question of ratios were allowed to be reopened the conference would go on ad infinitum and the whole thing would go on the rocks. The ratio was fixed after full investigation and consultation and will not be changed. It was explained, however, that auxiliary craft of all kinds are on a different footing. The various navies differ in their ideas about what auxiliaries are needed, and in what proportions, and Great Britain and Japan will be fully heard before exact rules are laid down.

Also, it was pointed out that Japan had been dealt with "very liberally" in fixing the present plan. The ratio was based on existing strength as of the date of November 14, 1921. What was meant by Japan's being treated very liberally was presumably that her geographical position was such that the agreed-upon ratio leaves her practically unbeatable by any power in Asiatic waters.

If a request for a special plenary session is made by Japan, it certainly cannot be refused.

Nor will the American delegation wish to oppose it. From the American point of view there can be only advantage in getting all the cards on the table, the Japanese along with the present. What set the Japanese discussing the advisability of making this request was not any one thing. It was several. The Chinese statement may be put first in importance.

Children may believe, if so inclined, that the Chinese statement was developed all by itself. Since President Harding invited the Chinese to the conference, on July 10, the Chinese minister has had meetings with Mr. Hughes on an average of three times a week. Perhaps they talked most of the time about the strength of hand in auction bridge needed to make a bid of no trumps.

JAPS SORE AT BRITISH.

The Japanese notice that this plan, worked out by the Chinese and the Americans together, and put forward by the Chinese so as to avoid our seeming to boss everything, is being looked upon as primarily a bulwark against Japanese aggression in China.

They are also extremely sore at the way the British are in fact presenting their case in many of the most important media of publicity. Some of those British over here who stand nearest to the Prime Minister are looking at the naval proposals largely from the standpoint of the Asiatic danger and the Japanese know it.

When the Japanese state their case before the plenary conference they will rip wide open the history of China. They will show that the whole system of exploiting her and disturbing her was built up long before they came on the scene at all.

WILL EXPOSE CHINESE GRABS.

They will point out that in 1842 Britain forced opium into China at the point of the bayonet. Her possession of Hong Kong dates back there, and her hold has not been extended a long distance up the Yang Tse Valley.

France began just forty-one years later. At that time she took Tongking and Annam. Fourteen years later she took Kwang-Chouwan. At the same time Great Britain took Shantung, which went over with a defective title, the United States and China not agreeing, to Japan at the end of the World War.

Why is Japan preparing to rub these things in? Partly because she genuinely resents being the goat, partly because it is the smartest way of meeting the situation created by the Chinese-American policy. That smartness consists not only in changing the atmosphere, if possible, in which the history of China is being considered, but also in perhaps making a still further delay.

Delay is looked upon as of the essence of Japanese policy. The bang with which the Americans and the Chinese have played their game fastened the attention of the world, and is somewhat embarrassing to the Japanese, as they think they can do better when attention has wandered.

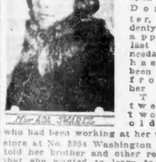
They admit that in its main lines the game is up. They cannot hold out against a Chinese-American policy that will be backed by Britain and France. But they will have a bit of trading to do before they sign.

The French open session is accumulating a number of questions which are delicate as between France and Great Britain. There is plenty of feeling among the British that in coming out for a naval program and for submarines the French are not expressing their real plans but are merely taking a stand to help them in their main and only cry, that they must have their safety guaranteed, either by an agreement or else by their own strength.

GIRL LEFT HOME AFTER FAMILY DIFFERENCE

Seek Dorchester Miss Who Disappeared After Being Told She Could Not Be Nurse

Refusal of her brother to sanction her attending a nurse's training school is believed to have been the reason Miss Ada Swartz, of No. 14 Fabyan street, Dorchester, suddenly disappeared last Wednesday and has not been heard from by her family.



Miss ADA SWARTZ

The twenty-two-year-old girl, who had been working at her uncle's store at No. 3094 Washington street, told her brother and other relatives that she wanted to learn to be a nurse at a school near Boston.

Louis Swartz, the brother, advised against her doing this, but at no time did she threaten to run away. Fearing that possibly some harm has befallen her, the family has appealed to the Boston American to help locate her.

A reward is offered by Louis Finkelstein, her uncle, for information as to her whereabouts. She is about five feet four inches tall, weighs 135 pounds, has dark hair and dark eyes.

When she left home, she did not take any extra clothes with her, and it is believed she had a small sum of money. She wore a blue serge pleated dress and brown wrap. Her shoes were low, with a single strap over the instep. They were black, as well as her stockings.

Today

The President's New Method
Germany Will Be Invited
Goodbye, Says Monsieur Briand
Banzai, Says Wise Japan
The Rainbow Fades, BUT—
It Was a Fine Rainbow

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Observe one thing about the Washington conference. The President lets others sit in the limelight. He is not like the little boy that wanted to kill all the blue bottle flies himself.

The limited navy plan was discussed at the White House, before the Hughes speech that startled everybody for a minute. It was the President that sent for the navy experts, and got the facts as to what might be done safely in their opinion, to agree on a battleship money saving program.

Then, when everything was ready, Secretary Hughes was allowed to hold the match, touch off the giant firecracker and make the loud oratorical noise.

That is a change. We have had presidents that like to make the noises themselves, and to sit, day and night just where the spot of the calcium light hits the stage.

The President was not merely anxious to give those that he appointed all the prestige possible. He does want that, and keeps in the background purposely. He also has felt that it would seem to put delegations from other nations at a disadvantage if he, head of the biggest nation, on the "home grounds," put his personal weight on the side of American argument.

His idea was to get them here, start them talking along lines of sane economy if possible and then, in the language of the alderman, let nature take her course.

It is his hope that out of this conference may grow sufficiently frequent discussions among the nations meeting in conference, as individual business men meet, with profit to everybody's business but without any man losing control of his own business. If you were to lunch with the President today you would hear him say: "I am not a League of Nations man."

The NEWS is that Germany will be invited to sit in, and join the conference officially. It is felt first that she is entitled to an invitation, since we are finally at peace, and, second, that no progress can be made in adjusting France's land armament policy except upon understanding with Germany.

That France will discuss seriously, or submit to any power but her own will the size of her army, is unlikely. Briand says he is going home in a few days. He will speak on Monday. The French are practical, like the man that had two pigs and therefore did not believe in communism. Things are now as France has wanted them ever since 1871, and she sits tight.

About battleships France does not care so much, for she is the nation that takes new ideas quickly. She saw England's mighty fleet hide away from submarines all through the war, kept carefully out of reach, as mother puts away the good china at the children's party. France has not been spending much on battleships.

She knows that one small submarine and a few flying machines, costing next to nothing, can destroy fleets of battleships costing forty millions apiece.

France says through Briand: "Awfully nice party, but I must go soon." She adds that France must have plenty of submarines, and so she must if she wants anything like safety. Exploiting Germany on a basis of well-planned economic slavery and fighting Russia to collect the uncollectable debt, France would be in sad straits if Russia and Germany, combined, ever came sailing through the Dardanelles and marching from the East. Plenty of submarines in the Mediterranean, plenty of men on her frontier, plenty of ships in the air, would be her only salvation. As for battleships, England, America and Japan may have those toys. France gives up hansom cabs when the taxi arrives.

The fact is that the conference is chewing a bone with no meat on it. England is making no fuss about battleships, but wants to suppress the NEW danger, which is the submarine. This country and France intend to have the submarines. England yesterday stopped work on four super-dreadnoughts. The battleship is dead.

England and France care little what we do. Neither expects trouble from this big business establishment, and if we will kindly forget or forgive their debts, we may play at great military nation and arbiter as much as we choose.

England and France are no longer on good terms. England thinks she suffers because the slow strangling of Germany spoils business. France thinks she saved England from Prussia, and she did. Therefore, says France, it is for me to do what I will with my vanquished foe. France and England are on strained relations. Englishmen tell you, in soft voice, that France is rather hard to get on with, "but, of course, we make allowances." France shrugs her shoulders, looks back over history, and says, "England changes little," meaning that you can't be sure of her.

As for Japan, it is an interesting party for her. She is playing with the grown-ups and expects to take home a few souvenirs. Because they tell her she can have so many battleships she wants more. Submarines do not disturb her. You can build those little things in sections, privately, put them together in a few days, and be ready for business.

The Japanese, returning to the Eastern land, where secrecy is an ancient trade, will be able to tell the Mikado, drawing in their breath: "We know a great deal more than we ever did about them. They know as little as ever about us. We can do about as we please, if we give it a civil name. Those whites have not learned yet to unite protection. They hate and mistrust each other, AND THEY FEAR US. A few banzais would be in order."

The news that you are reading tells you why England must stick to Japan, or thinks she must. The British prince, "welcomed" by the 300,000,000 Asiatic subjects of his father, finds that the welcome includes mobs, rioting. Unrest has reached the most sluggish, unresisting mind on earth. If you have ever seen respectability slumming in an opium joint and keeping close to the detective detailed to go along, you know why England snuggles up to Japan. Mr. Ghandi, opposing England in India about as efficiently as a gentle, humpbacked Indian cow might do, is one thing.

Put Mr. Kato with HIS equipment at Ghandi's side, and England would be out of India.

Why England should collect ancients countries, as some intelligent Americans collect old furniture and mouldy tapestries, is a mystery. But she does collect and counts on Japan to protect, or, at least, not help despoil her collection.

As for the conference that was to change the world and make men in 1921 what they MAY be in 10031, it is a beautiful rainbow, lovely colors, looks permanent, dominates the sky. But about the time you get the whole family out on the veranda to look at it, it has begun to fade.

The conference has begun to fade. And Congress, seizing the occasion, has begun to fight the President. We are having our second camp meeting revival. The first was in Paris. It's an international Chautauqua. People after all will be about the same as they were before.

If it should make clear to our nation that the only worth while reliance is on OURSELVES, if it should teach us by the attitude of England and France that we must turn for safety from the obsolete forty-million-dollar battleship to modern, cheaper weapons, it will have been for us a worth while display of American innocence and good will.

FORELADY GIVEN NINE MONTHS FOR LARCENY

Mrs. Virginia A. Mallery's Sentence Imposed After She Pleads for Leniency

Despite the plea of the probation officer that she be given another chance, and despite her own pathetic story, Mrs. Virginia A. Malley, pretty forelady in a downtown department store, was today sentenced to nine months in jail for larceny.

Sentence was imposed by Judge Creed in Municipal Court, in which court she was yesterday convicted of the theft of $1,485 in cash and goods from the store employing her.

In court, Mrs. Malley, who is thirty-two-years old, and of the brisk, competent, pleasant type of young business woman, made a pitiful appeal for leniency, pleading that she was helping two young brothers-in-law who were out of work.

Judge Creed in explanation said that this plea might have had some effect had it not been that the evidence disclosed she had $1,000 in a bank and so could not have been so utterly destitute.

Mrs. Malley appealed and was held in $1,500 bail, which was furnished by her husband, Anthony S. Malley with whom she lives in Queensbury street, Back Bay.

DOGS' BONES INTRODUCED IN TRIAL OF 'BLUEBEARD'

Versailles, Nov. 19.—Two dogs, which had been the property of Mademoiselle Marchandier, the eleventh and last alleged victim of Henri Landru, the "Bluebeard of Gambais," figured in Landru's trial for murder here today.

The bones of the two dogs were produced in court. The State charged that these dogs were killed by Landru at Gambais at the time of his alleged murder of their mistress.

ESSEX COUNTY COMMISSION UNDER FIRE

Grand Jury Probe of Building Contracts Ordered by District Attorney

Announcement by District Attorney S. Howard Donnell of Essex County, that the Grand Jury would be asked to investigate charges of gross extravagance and negligence of duty preferred by prominent business men against the county administration acted like a bombshell in political and business circles of Salem, Lynn and other Essex cities today.

Neither the District Attorney nor Ralph S. Bauer, president of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce; Harry P. Gifford, president of the Salem Chamber, or William H. Day, Jr., president of the Essex County Associated Boards of Trade, would discuss the report.

It was admitted, however, that the "whole matter of whether in the general conduct of affairs in the county and their administration by the County Commissioners, any crime has been committed would be determined by the Grand Jury."

District Attorney Donnell announced that the Grand Jury would be called in a special session about the first of the coming month to consider allegations against certain heads of departments in Lawrence, especially in connection with the awarding of contracts.

Charges of bribery against employes of the city of Methuen also will be taken up and thoroughly probed by the investigating body, as will the charges affecting the administration of the county as a whole.

Bauer, Gifford and Day were in secret conference with Donnell and are said to have submitted a mass of evidence in support of their charges, but none of the details of the charges were allowed to leak out to the public.

One of the allegations is said to result from the construction of the Essex County Tuberculosis Hospital, now building, and which has cost to date about $1,250,000.

It is also understood today that the Grand Jury will be asked to investigate affairs connected with the conduct of the Essex County Agricultural School at Danvers.

MUST DEVELOP NEW WEAPONS, SAYS SIMS

Fears America Is Entering Period That May Be Dangerous for the Nation

By Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 19—Rear Admiral William S. Sims, in delivering his annual address as president of the Naval War College to its graduating class of officers today, discussed "Military Conservatism," refering he said specifically to that type and degree of conservatism "which has so often been responsible for defeat in batti, and sometimes for national disaster."

Quoting from history to show that there his always been resistance to new weapons or methods of warfare, he said:

"Th rapid development of the submarine and the airplane during the war, and the continuous development of both, and especially the latter, since the war, have shown that these powerful weapons are still in their infancy; that great possibilities of development are clearly in sight; and that it will require the most careful, devoted, and logical consideration upon our part even to keep abreast of the developments in foreign navis, much less to anticipate these developments."

Admiral Sims, asserting that our gunnery up to 1908 was so inefficient "that an equal force of ships of any navy could have inflicted upon us a most humiliating defeat," added:

"In my opinion we are now entering a period that may become still more dangerous if we fail correctly to interpret the significance of the rapid development of fundamentally new weapons of enormous destructive power and of relative immunity to effective resistance by any means except a decisive superiority of similar weapons.

"We may escape this danger in future, as has so often been the case in the past, through the superior vision of a Roosevelt, or through the pressure of public opinion, overcoming the excessive conservatism of military minds.

"So strong has been the resistance to the general introduction of any new weapons or methods of warefare that one is almost forced to conclude that the military classes of all ages were all recruited from the Missouri of their respective countries.

"It may be stated in general terms that most argumens in favor of fundamentally new weapons have failed except those that resulted in shedding of blood of the unbelievers; that defeat alone has been accepted as a final demonstration."

BABY AND COUPLE WHOSE WEDDING WAS MARRED

FIGURES IN DRAMATIC SCENE

Child shown above is "Edward Joseph Farrington," whose mother, Miss Loretta Rodden, bestowed on him the name of the wealthy Waterbury youth whose church wedding was sensationally intruded upon when the baby, in the mother's arms, was suddenly thrust into the view of the startled throng. BRIDE IS SICK AFTER SCENE AT CHURCH

"That man is the father of my child." And as she spoke she held her baby son up to the view of the assembly.

Then the mother of the girl arose and, pointing dramatically at Farrington, declared that he was the father of her daughter's child. The uproar in the church increased with the speech of the mother. Ushers rushed toward the pair to escort them out.

The mother and her daughter carrying the infant turned and walked calmly down the aisle and out of the church. In a short time the uproar subsided and the ceremony was completed.

The interruption by the girl came just as the officiating clergyman was about to pronounce the solemn words that would bind Farrington and Miss Hodson together for life.

Young Farrington is but twenty-three years old. He was a student at Yale when the war broke out, and enlisted in the army. He did not return to college after his return, and has been engaged in business with his father, Daniel J. Farrington, prominent real estate dealer and banker here.

Miss Rodden lives with her mother at Watertown, a suburb. She is young and pretty. She declared Farrington wronged her while he was engaged to her when she was but sixteen years of age.

Parents of Farrington stated the girl's story had no foundation, and alleged it was simply a case of spite on the part of the girl that led to the episode in the church.

BRIEF ROMANCE OF FILM STAR ENDED

The entire film world is wondering today just what has caused the rift in the married life of Constance Talmadge, film star, and her tobacco-king husband, John Pialoglo.

The pair separated about a month ago, and now it is announced that the beautiful film star is about to go to the courts for a divorce, and that she expects no opposition from her Greek husband.

"Does John eat spinach?" is one of the questions that is being asked on all sides, for long before her marriage to the wealthy tobacco merchant, ten months ago, Constance had stated that she could never marry a man who ate this well-known vegetable.

In fact the pretty screen star outlined what she called her "seven points of matrimony" which a future husband would have to measure up to if happiness was to be in store. The seven points were:

He must not eat spinach; must not wear tan shoes; must not carry an umbrella; must not have a beard; must not wear a ring on his middle finger; must not say, "I'm feeling badly," and must, above all, sing tenor.

There was considerable speculation when she and Dorothy Gish surprised the film world ten months ago by running over to Greenwich, Ct., from New York, and playing the principal roles in a double wedding.

BANDITS WITH STOLEN SAFE SURROUNDED

Police Trail Haverhill Thieves to Dense Woods Near Salem, N. H.

Haverhill, Nov. 19.—A dozen policemen, headed by Captain Arthur Sullivan, are beating through a clump of densely-wooded territory near Salem, N. H., in an effort to capture five automobile bandits who late last night broke into a restaurant here and carried off a 150-pound safe containing $300 after they had stolen a machine that was parked on Emerson street.

The officers, who are heavily armed, have surrounded the woods where the bandits are believed to be in hiding and are gradually working in towards the centre. They left Haverhill on the chase shortly after midnight today.

The bandits abandoned their machine, the property of Sherman Pike of Groveland, at the edge of Salem when Patrolman Frank Stickney of the Salem force surprised them as they were stopped by the roadside and were attempting to open the safe. They fled at his approach, eluding a number of shots he fired after them, and disappeared in the darkness.

Breaking through a rear door, the bandits dragged the safe out and put it in the car, after which they drove for Salem. A few moments later Mrs. Corliss had occasion to go to her place of business, and found the restaurant rifled. She immediately notified police, almost at the same moment that Pike came out of the theatre and told them his car had been stolen.

JAPAN WOULD PROFIT ENORMOUSLY FROM FREE CHINA, SAYS WELLS

PEACE OR WAR?
Studies at the Washington Conference.
IX.
THE FUTURE OF JAPAN.

Washington, Nov. 21.—If we adopt as our guiding principle that China is "worth while," if we make up our minds, and it seems to me that the American public at least is making up its mind, that China is to bring itself up to date and to reorganize itself as a great union of States under purely Chinese control, and that it is to be protected by mutual agreement among the powers from outside interference during the age of reorganization, then it is clear that all dreams of empire in China or any fragments of China on the part of any other power must cease.

This building up of a united, peaceful China by the conscious self-denying action of the chief powers of the world is evidently, under present conditions, the only sane policy before the powers assembled at Washington, but it is unhappily quite diametrically opposed to all traditions of competitive nationality. And I find a most extraordinary conflict going on in men's minds here in Washington between the manifest sanities of the world situation and those habits of thought and action in which we have all been bred.

Competitive nationalism and the long established competitive traditions of European diplomacy have gone far towards wrecking the world; and they may yet go far towards wrecking the Washington conference. We have all got these traditions strong in us, every one of us. These traditions, these ideas of international intercourse as a sort of game to beat the other fellow, have as tough a vitality as the appetite of the wasp, which will go on eating greedily after its abdomen has been cut off.

China As a Feast Quite Indigestible

Indeed, some of the representatives of the powers at Washington seem still to be clinging to the ambition of finally devouring China, or large parts of China—a feast which they will not have the remotest prospect of digesting.

If that sort of thing goes on, a continuation of war preparation, a renewal of war and the consummation of the social smash now in progress is inevitable. Yet, on the face of that plain inevitable consequence, my diplomatic friends in Washington go on talking about such insane projects as that of ceding Manchuria to Japan right down to the Great Wall, of giving Japan practical possession of the mines of China, of giving "compensation" in the matter of Chinese railways to France, of getting this "advantage" or that for Great Britain, and so forth and so on.

Sees Covenant As Real Aid to Japan

Would a world covenant to protect China from aggression and to concede her the progressive abolition of extra territorial privileges, and the same unlimited rights over her own railways and soil and revenue that are enjoyed by the Americans and Japanese over theirs, be any serious harm to Japan? Would it not release Japan from her imitative career as a pseudo-Britain or a Pseudo-Germany and enable her to get on with her own proper business, which is to be to the fullest, completest and richest extent Japan.

For what after all is it that Japan wants? She wants safety, she declares, just as France wants safety. She wants safety to be Japan, just as France wants safety to be France and England wants safety to be England. And she makes these declarations with considerable justification. For 300 years she believed she had that safety, and we must admit she was the least dangerous state in the whole world.

For 300 years Japan waged no foreign wars; she was a peaceful, self-contained hermit. It was American enterprise that dragged her out of her seclusion and fear of Europe that drove her to the practices of modern imperialism. They are not natural Japanese practices. She fought China and grabbed Korea, because otherwise Russia would have held it like a pistol at her throat; she fought Russia because otherwise Russia would have held Manchuria and Port Arthur against her; she fought in the Great War to oust Germany from Shantung.

She is now pursuing an entirely "European" policy in China, intriguing to get a free hand in Manchuria and eastern Siberia, scheming for concessions, privileges and the creation of obedient puppet governments in a dismembered China, planning to divert the natural resources of China to her own use, primarily because she fears that otherwise these things will be done by rival powers and she will be cut off from trade, from raw materials and all prosperity, until at last when she is sufficiently starved and enfeebled she will be attacked and India-ized.

These are reasonable, honest fears. They oblige her to keep armed and aggressive; hers is an "offensive defensive." There is no other way of allaying her reasonable, just fears except by a permanent binding Association of World Powers to put an end forever to the headlong scramble for Asia that began a century and a half ago in India between the French and English, to recognize frankly and to put it upon record that that phase of history has closed, and to provide some effective means of restoration now and the prevention of fresh aggressions in the future.

Japan had most of the fun and little of the bitterness of the Great War and her people may conceivably have a lighter attitude towards aggressive wars than any European nation. But if the alternatives presented to her were, on the one hand, disarmament and a self-denying ordnance of the powers in relation to China, and, on the other, war against the other chief powers of the world, I doubt if the patriotism of even the most war-loving Japanese would not outbalance his war lust. And I cannot imagine any other permanent settlement of the Pacific situation except a self-denying ordnance to which Japan, America and the European powers can ever possibly agree.

Self-Denying Pact Only Real Solution

Now Japan, disarmed and pledged and self-restrained by treaties and associations against aggression on the mainland of Asia, would, nevertheless, reap enormous benefits from the liberation of China. Given just and reasonable treaties, she can do very well without armaments. Her geographical position would make her naturally and properly the first merchant and the first customer of a renascent China.

She would have the first bid for all the coal and ore and foodstuffs she needed. American goods and European goods would have to come past her over thousands of miles of sea. Chinese goods that did not come to her would go elsewhere up a steep hill of freight charges. It is a preposterous imagination that China would refuse to sell to her nearest and best customer.

An association of Japan with other nations to insure uninterrupted development to China would insure that to Japan also. It would be a mutual assurance of peace and security.

But there is one set of facts and one only that militates against this idea of a pacific and progressive Japan, a splendid leader in civilization amidst a brotherhood of nations, and that is this, that Japan is already over-populated, she has to import not only food but industrial raw material, and that her population increases now by the tremendous figure of half a million a year. That is the reality that gives substance to the aggressive imperialism of Japan.

Birth Control Seen As Far East Factor

That is why she casts about for such regions for expansion as Eastern Siberia—a region not represented at the conference and so beyond its purview, and that is why she covets some preferential control in Chinese metals and minerals and food. Were it not for this steady invasion of the work by hungry lives, the principle of Japan for the Japanese, China for the Chinese, England for the English, Eastern Siberia for its own people, would give us the simplest, most satisfactory principle for international peace. But Japan teems.

Has any country a right to slop its population over and beyond its boundaries or to claim trade and food because of its heedless self-congestion? Diplomacy is curiously mealy-mouthed about many things; I have made a British official blush at the words Birth Control, but it is a fact that the aggressive fecundity of peoples is something that can be changed and restrained within a country, and that this sort of modesty and innocence that leads to a morbid development of population, and so to great wars, calls for intelligent discouragement in international relations.

I submit that the troubles arising from excessive fecundity within a country justifies not an aggressive imperialism on the part of that country, but a sufficient amount of Birth Control within its proper boundaries.

The captain performed a deep sea marriage, which Judge Morton declared valid.

Declares Candy Lure of Strangers Imperils Small Children

MISS THEODORE D. LOCHNER.

WARNS AGAINST DANGER TO CHILDREN

"Warn your daughter against the well dressed strangers who offer candy to little girls on the street. Tell them something of life. Forearm them against the dangers that even little girls face in a big city."

This is the advice given the mothers of Greater Boston by Mrs. Theodore Lochner of No. 25 Bickerstaff street, Back Bay, in revealing the fact that her little four-year-old daughter was lured by a man of this species and was saved from harm only by the timely arrival of neighbors.

Police are keeping a close watch for the man, who has made advances to other little girls.

"I do not like to make public the story of the unsuccessful attempt to attack Virginia, my little girl," said Mrs. Lochner, "but I felt that I owed it to the other mothers and little girls of the city.

"If false modesty keeps victims or near victims in such cases silent, these beasts can work in no fear of detection."

Virginia Lochner, who has been taught all of the real facts of life that her childish mind can grasp, has given a good description of the man, who was red-faced and well dressed. Promising her candy, he took her to the roof of an apartment house, but fled when a man and wife also came up on the roof to beat rugs.

WEDDING IS OFF UNTIL RENTS COME DOWN

Watertown Man and Newton Girl Return License After Failing to Find Home

Arthur L. Mabee of Union street, Watertown, a motorman on the Boston Elevated, and Miss Hester O. McPherson, an attractive maid in Newton have decided to postpone their marriage until "the rent profiteers stop squeezing the life blood out of people."

Mabee today explained that the marriage license issued last October has been returned unused to Town Clerk William T. McGuire, and that he and Miss McPherson are going to wait indefinitely.

"Married life in a couple of rented rooms where the landlord takes every cent you make, is not worth while," said Mabee.

"Miss McPherson and I have known each other for two years, and last month we took out the license to get married, intending to wed immediately.

"We had our furniture ready and in storage, and as soon as we decided to get married we started hunting for a house in which to live. All over Watertown, the Newtons and as far as Cambridge we searched and could find nothing under $50 a month. That included places that are not worth a third of that amount.

"So Hester and I talked it all over and came to the conclusion to go on working until things change for the better.

"One of the reasons why we had to defer getting married was the fact that some mining stock I had bought passed its dividend."

Miss McPherson and her sister, Miss Mabel McPherson, also of Newton, came to this part of the country from Nova Scotia about five years ago. Both girls have been employed since then.

'LIEUTENANT' IS ACCUSED BY BOSTON GIRL

Arrested on Charge of Posing as Naval Officer and Named in Trunk Theft

A pretty Dorchester girl, a chance meeting with a dapper looking "naval lieutenant" on one of the Fall River Line boats, and a trunk that never reached its destination, combined to cause the arrest in Philadelphia today of J. R. Kane, alias Small, on a charge of falsely representing himself as a naval officer.

"Lieutenant Small" or Kane, will be brought back here, where a charge of larceny of a trunk and its contents, valued at $500, will be brought against him by a Miss Regan of Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester.

The story properly begins when the handsome "officer" met Miss Regan coming over on the boat from New York. He laid seige to her, Miss Regan says, and she admits she was "quite taken" with his winning personality.

At the end of the trip Miss Regan asked "Lieutenant Small" to check her trunk at the South Station and then forward it to her Dorchester home. After waiting for it for several days she complained to the navel authorities and was told her "hero" had never been in the navy.

Chief Naval Provost Guard Frank Feeney trailed the man from a Columbus avenue hotel to the Back Bay Station, where he learned that the suspect had boarded a train for Philadelphia. The latter authorities were communicated with and the "lieutenant" was arrested as he alighted from a train in the Quaker City.

ULSTER PARLIAMENT IS CALLED INTO SESSION

LAWRENCE "BOMB" WAS PERFECTLY HARMLESS

State Chemist Walter L. Wedger has definitely determined that the supposed "bomb" found Thursday night on the ground in front of the State Armory, Lawrence, where 1,000 Masons were gathered, was nothing but an "unexploded flashlight shell and perfectly harmless." This announcement was made by the State chemist after he had carefully analyzed the "bomb." It contained about two tablespoonsful of flashlight powder.

MRS. COOK SAYS SHE SUFFERED FROM BEATING

Wife of Former Harvard Instructor Accuses Him of Cruelty in Divorce Plea

Walter W. S. Cook, former Harvard instructor and now a fellow of the American Archeological Institute, was in the habit of striking his wife, Mrs. Harriette G. Cook, of No. 179 Brattle street, Cambridge, according to the formal specifications of her charges in her suit for divorce, which have been filed with the Superior Court.

In the specifications Mrs. Cook alleges that while he was in Europe, where he went eight months after their marriage, Cook wrote her frequent "abusive, cruel and even brutal" letters which caused her intense mental anguish.

On his return home in October, 1920, the charges continue, and on many other occasions he "threatened her causing her "much bodily harm and mental fear."

The marital troubles of the Cooks, which both wife and husband declared started almost immediately after their marriage, came to light November 5 when Mrs. Cook had her husband arrested charged with malicious trespass at her Brattle street residence. Cook admitted the trespass and said that he had gone there to obtain some of his own property, which he alleged his wife was withholding.

Later this charge was dropped upon Cook's promise to keep away from the Brattle street house.

Cook charges that his wife and her former husband, now a professor at Purdue University, had plotted to force him to agree to a divorce. He filed a bill in equity seeking to replevin certain property of his at the Brattle street home, which he said his wife was holding to compel him to restore to her certain letters by her first husband. This he refused to do.

COAKLEY TO USE STEARNS' CASE DOCUMENTS

Granted Permission to Take Photographs of Letters in Tufts' Trial

Attorney Daniel H. Coakley today took his first definite forward step in preparing for trial in the disbarment proceedings pending against him, when he filed a petition with the Supreme Court to be allowed to take photographs of certain exhibits which figured in the trial of Nathan A. Tufts and will figure in his trial as well.

These exhibits were attached to the deposition of Mrs. Benjamin Sewall in the Tufts trial.

Mrs. Sewall was formerly the wife of Captain Charles E. Stearns of Waltham, and it was charged that Tufts conspired with "certain persons" to secure the commission of a statutory offence by Stearns so that his wife at that time might get a divorce. Coakley was mentioned as counsel for Mrs. Stearns.

The photographs he wished permission to take today were of letters attached to that deposition of Mrs. Sewall. Judge DeCourcey gave him permission. The action was technical and lasted but a few minutes. Coakley, who is confined to his home by a sprained ankle, was represented by W. Minot Hurd. Attorney Andrew Marshall represented the Bar Association and made no objection to Coakley's request.

Asserts Some Homes Should Be Destroyed

MISS MARJORIE JENKINS

Young clubwoman of Milton, who replies to the assertion of Rev. Fred Winslow of Springfield that the American home is disintegrating. (Photo by White of Boston.)

By HAZEL CANNING.

Is feminism disintegrating the American home?

Rev. Mr. Fred Winslow of Springfield, speaking before the National Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says that it is.

Mrs. William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., leading woman citizen, member of an illustrous family, mother of six children, says it is not.

And Miss Marjorie Jenkins, young clubwoman of Milton, replies: "What if it is? Perhaps the American home—at least some American homes—have arrived at the state where they are better disintegrated."

NOW ROCKING THE BOAT.

The question, apparently, has more than one side. As the Rev. Mr. Winslow first presented it, "This new feminism is drawing the best of our womanhood from marriage and motherhood, while loose ideas of the permanence of the marriage tie are being imported by Russian barefoot dancers. That hand that used to rock the cradle is now rocking the boat of our family life."

Mrs. Garrison, with emphasis, denies the charges of the reverend gentleman.

"A bit absurd," says she. "American homes still have their safeguard in the loyal hearts of American women who make those homes. I don't deny that the times are growing laxer than they used to be. But the freedom of our manners is not due to license of our women, but to license of the war.

"WAR ON CAPITALISM."

"For years the world waged a war, in the high name of democracy, which was nothing but a war of capitalism. Now we have drifted into a period of loose manners, lewd dances, acquiescent young women, and mothers dead to their responsibilities. We say that feminism is to blame for all this. This is alibi far fetched.

"Wars have always left in their wake grievous moral turpitude. And this last war, which, they told us, was waged to prevent all future wars, has left us a dreary backwash of moral restlessness, sorry to contemplate.

"But the one thing which stands out to save the world in [illegible] less day is the age-old wholesome instinct of woman. I notice my friends who have worked for [illegible] until it was won, who have worked for many good and constructive causes, are the women [illegible] in the tabernacles of their homes, are building up the old faiths [illegible] batting the new heresies.

"Where the home is assailed, where license rules for law, we can trace the cause back to the mother and father.

"Some mothers are responsible when our youths and maidens go to dances and drink from the little pocket flasks, as they tell at Boston University, drink, thinking it is smart to drink.

"But there are ways of [illegible] these follies. And one way is to place the blame where it belongs. And so, when laxities are mentioned in marriages too easily broken, look to the war for its causes. And take from current life the text—the world cannot afford another such [illegible] of havoc. For it costs too much in destruction of our sons and destruction of our morals. The time has come when such waste should be stopped forever."

Now Miss Jenkins brings in the assertion that feminism is destroying the home the point of view of the very young woman.

"In the first place," she points out, "I have seen a few homes in my lifetime supposed to be finest exponents of morals, manners and religion which were nothing but [illegible] hypocrisies, deserving to be destroyed.

WHAT ABOUT THE MEN?

"The sooner the women in such homes [illegible] over the cradles and rock the domestic boat till it upsets, the better it will be for good old sincerity.

"However, all these well-meaning clergymen who go about attacking women who want a career are too stupid to be listened to. Why don't they trace some of the danger they predict for the home to men as well as women?

"Why don't they say the home would not be undermined if only men stopped drinking prohibition whiskey, or tied their cravats a new way, or darned their own stockings, or gave up the other woman at the third end of a triangle? In other words, why don't these gloomy old ministers get original and blame something new for a change?

"For my part I think the home is well rid of any woman who finds home irksome. I think children are better off [illegible] a mother who prefers [illegible] to their precious children here. I am not alarmed, for I believe in old human nature. Women were made for homes and husbands and children, before ever they were taught to dance or roam abroad [illegible]. You can't beat nature—not with all the witcheries of feminist's [illegible].

"So that's why I think the good clergyman was just talking through his blessed old minister's hat."

MISS DILLON, CAMBRIDGE BEAUTY, WEDS LAWYER

Word has just been received in Cambridge of the marriage in New Haven of Miss Mabel Dillon, actress and Cambridge beauty, to Joseph Koletzky, New Haven attorney. Miss Dillon jumped into prominence when she won a nation-wide screen beauty contest. She then went on the stage and, until her marriage, was featured in a diving act.

WHY?

Science appears to have found a probable reason for the strange disappearances of the daughters of the wealthy and fashionable. There have been a number of these cases of late. Why do rich girls leave home? Read what the doctors say, see the pictures, in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

ARBUCKLE SEES SCENE OF FATAL PARTY AGAIN

Is Taken With Jury to View Hotel Suite Where Virginia Rappe Met Death Injuries

By International News Service

San Francisco, Nov. 19.—A little over two months ago an automobile costing something like $25,000 drew up at the portals of San Francisco's most prominent hostelry and deposited at its portals its 265-pound owner. The arrival registered as "Roscoe Arbuckle" and the elevator carried him to the twelfth floor.

Then began a gay party which ended in death.

Today the elevator carried the same man up to the same suite of rooms on the twelfth floor of the same hotel, but accompanying him was a different sort of party. It was the jury trying him for manslaughter.

In order that the seven men and five women which yesterday heard the first of the State's testimony of the famous film star charged with responsibility for the death of Virginia Rappe, might understand fully the details of the party to be related by the State in its attempt to convict, arrangements were made for the visit to the hotel.

WANTED HALF DAY.

Gavin McNab, counsel for Arbuckle, suggested that the jury go and see the rooms and learn for themselves their arrangement with the location of the doors and furniture which are to figure prominently in the evidence.

The District Attorney heartily seconded the suggestion and Judge Louderback said with the reconvening of court today the plan would be carried out.

The jury also must decide today just how fast the case is to be speeded up. This is the day of the "big" football game between California and Stanford. Most of the counsel and court attaches are sons of one or the other two institutions that will fight for gridiron supremacy. It was rather timidly suggested by counsel for both sides that no session be held today.

The suggestion was quickly withdrawn. It brought from Judge Louderback the announcement that all-day sessions would be held Saturdays and that night sessions in all probability would prevail.

FAVORABLE TO DEFENCE.

But he conceded that the jury might vote today as to whether this afternoon would be a half-holiday. The younger members of the legal staffs are praying the jury—which can't go to the football game—will not be mean about it.

The sum total of the first day's evidence taking was not unfavorable to the defence. Dr. Shelby Strange, official autopsy surgeon, a State witness, was not a positive witness.

On cross-examination he proved uncertain as to the time at which bruises he discovered on the body of Virginia Rappe might have been incurred. The State did not dwell on this testimony long.

QUESTION BARRED.

Dr. William Ophuls, Stanford Hospital surgeon, gray of beard, long of experience, and well acquainted with the ways of the witness chair, was a much better witness. He was positive, and when the defence seemed to corner him on a question, he insisted on his right to explain and usually won his point.

The state gained a legal victory when the defence's first hypothetical question to him was barred.

He expressed the opinion that the injury which he described as finding in the body of Virginia Rappe was the result of a "display of violence." On cross-examination he admitted a possibility that "muscular contraction" could have caused it.

NEW BEDFORD LAWYER ACCUSED OF LARCENY

New Bedford, Nov. 19.—Attorney Edward T. Bannon of New Bedford, long sought as a witness in the so-called Hilltop Inn gambling cases in Providence, was arraigned in District Court today, charged with larceny of $3,000 and with conveying encumbered land without notice to the proper parties. Charles B. Thompson of Purchase street, New Bedford, the complainant, was to be the principal witness against him. Bannon's defence was to be that the $3,000 involved was borrowed by him from Thompson, and that his failure to pay was due to a misunderstanding.

LEGION MAN IN RACE FOR LAWRENCE MAYOR

Members of American Legion posts all over the State are watching the city election in Lawrence, which takes place next Tuesday, with unusual interest.

William MacGuinness, a popular ex-service man, is one of the principal candidates for Mayor. He is an overseas veteran, was wounded in action while a member of Battery C, 102d Field Artillery, and, through meritorious service, rose to the rank of captain.

SPRINGFIELD MAN IS KILLED IN AIRPLANE

Hartford, Ct., Nov. 19.—The body of H. D. Lindsley, sixty years old, of No. 29 Bradford street, Springfield, Mass., who was killed in an airplane accident when the plane in which he was a passenger crashed into a tree in a dense fog, will be taken back to Springfield for burial.

Here Is Chance to Perform a Kindly Christmas Act

Do you wish to perform a good deed? Read the following letter from the invalid mother of six children, whose husband is out of work. If you think this family should receive a parcel of food from the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, send us your contribution at once.

"Being the mother of six small children is the only thing that gives me the courage to write to you for a basket. Their father has been out of work for nine long months, and my heart is wrung with hopelessness when I think of the coming holidays. It is doubly hard to write, when I see that so many on this street do not have to think of such a thing, but at present I would sacrifice anything for the children. I have been an invalid for five years, and it seems as if all our money went to doctors when he was working, so that when the crash came it was doubly hard. I hardly dare hope to get a basket, but the spirit came over me today to write. Perhaps tomorrow I wouldn't."

GIRLS TO HOLD DANCE FOR XMAS FUND

Boston American Employes to Give Affair in Cambridge December 5

An entertainment and dance in aid of the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund will be conducted in St. Mary's Hall, Cambridge, on Monday Evening, December 5, by a group of pretty girls employed in the Boston American office.

These girls have grouped themselves into an organization called "The Boston American Girls' Club," and are enthusiastic over the idea of raising funds to feed needy families at Yuletide.

A famous jazz orchestra will be engaged to play for general dancing, which is to follow an attractive entertainment consisting of solo dancing, and vocal numbers. In order to accommodate a large crowd, the low admission price of fifty cents has been placed on tickets.

The girls who comprise the committee in charge of the event are: Irene McCarty, Agnes Kelley, Mary F. Mooney, Agnes O'Connor, Gertrude Hershon, Emily Thomas, Alice Golden, Rose Siegal, Grace Kelley, Mary Mahoney, Isabel McGovern, Grace Donahue, Peggy Lordan, Louise Pasquina and Madeline Beaton.

NOVELTY DANCES PLANNED.

Several novelty dances have been arranged, including an elimination dance, for which special prizes have been offered. George H. Curry, of Roxbury, who donated prizes for a similar event at the dancing party conducted by the Boston American Girls' Club last year, has agreed to give prizes again this year.

The party conducted by the girls last year is well remembered by those who attended. All agreed they had an unusually good time, and most of them have decided to attend this year's party.

Three thousand packages of Salada Tea have been contributed to the Christmas Fund through the courtesy of Peter C. Larkin, president of the company. One package of this widely known brand of tea will be placed in each of the parcels of food for distribution at Christmas. This is an annual contribution from Mr. Larkin, who is an enthusiastic believer in the work done by the Christmas Fund. This excellent beverage will help materially in rounding out the Christmas dinners.

HAMMOND SENDS $100.

A check for $100 was forwarded to the Fund by John Hays Hammond, the widely known mining engineer, who passes his Winters in Washington and Summers on the North Shore. In addition to being a mining expert, Mr. Hammond is a civic leader of repute. He has done much philanthropic work and for the past few years has been a regular contributor to the American's Fund.

Fred Passentine, in sending a donation, wrote:

"Please accept this dollar bill for your Christmas Fund, and may it make some one as happy as it does my wife and me to be able to contribute.

"I have been out of work a great deal myself in the past two years, and have had to grab at anything that came along. Besides being out of work, I have had to take my wife to the hospital, where she was operated on twice in six months.

"Instead of our public officials planning on how to lavish entertainments and presents on foreign heroes, etc., let them spend part of that time to help the heroes at home and keep them from starving, and give us the bonus we are entitled to, while it's badly needed."

LABOR UNIONS AID.

One of the first labor unions to contribute to the Fund was the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union of America, which sent a check for $10. It was forwarded by Secretary-Treasurer A. Bronson.

Dorothy L. Glover of Roxbury, captain of Troop 7, Roxbury Girl Scouts, sent $5. It represents a donation from the Scouts, who made a similar gift last year.

Mrs. Johanna Midleton in sending a donation of $5 wrote: "Please accept enclosed $5, with a prayer that Our Lord may reign supreme in the hearts of men."

M. M. Casey of Milton, in sending $1, said he was "sorry it cannot be more, but wish you success in your great undertaking."

MORE APPEALS FOR FOOD.

Pathetic appeals for food are being received daily.

A woman from Cambridge wrote:

"I am a widow with five children, the eldest nine years, and the youngest four months. My husband died three months ago, and if you will send us a Christmas Basket, we will be very happy."

From the South End came the following:

"Please do not forget us Christmas, as papa, who is an ex-service man, is out of work, and it will be a dreary Christmas, if you do not send us a basket."

The following appeal came from East Boston:

"I beg of you not to forget my little family of four this Christmas. My husband has only worked two months since last Christmas. I am afraid we will have a very poor dinner, unless you remember us with a basket."

A woman from Charlestown wrote:

"Please send me a Christmas Basket, as my husband is dead and I have five small children. I have to work hard to support them and pay rent. I will be thankful if you don't forget me."

From Roxbury came the following appeal:

"I have a husband and brother out of employment and times are so hard they cannot find any work. There will be no happiness this Christmas if you do not send us a Christmas Basket."

The following appeal from East Boston:

"Would you please send me a Christmas Basket. My husband is out of work, and I have five small children. The oldest is ten years old, and the youngest four months. Please make us happy Christmas."

'THEODORA' IS THE GREATEST OF FILMS

Colossal Motion Picture to Be Shown at Shubert Commencing Monday

After two years of preparation and the expenditure of more than 15,000,000 lire (about $8,000,000 at normal rate of exchange) Goldwyn will present at the Shubert Theatre, beginning Monday evening, November 21 for a limited engagement, the big Italian screen spectacle, "Theodora." This colossal motion picture was made in Italy by the Unione Cinematografica Italiana, and has not yet been released abroad.

"Theodora" is the first big Italian photodrama made since the war, and is a screening of Sardou's famous romance, built around the historic personage of the Empress Theodora who ruled the Roman empire in the Sixth Century as the wife of the celebrated Justinian. Historians have disagreed for many centuries about the virtues and the faults of the great Theodora, but all agree that she was of surprising loveliness and exquisite charm. She was the daughter of a lion tamer in the circus at Byzantium (as Constantinople was then called) and led a life of pleasure until she met Justinian, the heir to the throne of the Caesars. He fell madly in love with her and their marriage elevated her to the throne when he became Emperor. The life of Theodora after she became an empress is reflected in the film, together with the historic love story of her mad infatuation for the young Greek, Andreas, for whom she sacrificed her throne. The screen story follows the general outlines of Sardou's famous romance, which was acted originally by Sarah Bernhardt and glorifies Theodora in her supreme sacrifice for the real love that came into her life. Yet Theodora, with all her charms, was a mad, unreasoning woman when it came to saving the life of her lover, for in order to distract attention when he is sentenced to death she turns forty lions into the arena among the mob, so that Andreas made his escape in the confusion. This startling and sensational effect has been screened with the utmost realism in "Theodora." There are many massive sets, many immense ensembles which employ as many as 25,000 people at one time and an impressive cast, headed by the French actress, Rita Jolivet, in the title role of Theodora.

SALVATION ARMY FUND REACHES $151,000

The Salvation Army drive has started on the last—and toughest—quarter. The fund reached the $151,000 mark Friday. This leaves $49,000 to be subscribed, and Director Bard says if the public will only realize the necessity and the chairmen of committees will make a final effort, the $200,000 will be subscribed in a few days.

Chairman Johnson, of the Maintenance Committee, with General Cole, Louis A. Coolidge and a few others are busy "jacking up" the friends of the Salvation Army and the chairmen of the groups.

WHOLESALE PRICE DOWN 1 PER CENT. LAST MONTH

Washington, Nov. 19.—A slight recession in wholesale prices was indicated during October, the Department of Labor announced today, the decline representing a little more than 1 per cent. in the "weighted index number," by which the Bureau of Labor Statistics measures the level of prices. For the first time since June, the statement said, farm products showed a net decrease, due to the drop in prices of corn, wheat and other grains.

BUSINESS TURN SEEN IN LARGE AUTO ORDERS

Big Bookings for Future Delivery Mark Return of Confidence, Nash Head Says

In analyzing the business situation in connection with motor cars, C. P. Rockwell, president of C. P. Rockwell, Inc., Nash distributors, says:

"The best index of the fact that the tide of commerce is flowing in is proven by the large number of orders which are now being booked for Spring delivery."

Mr. Rockwell says that the number of future delivery orders now in hand is far in excess of the number in 1920 even up to February 1, 1921.

"Confidence is being restored and these future orders are proof of that fact," continues Mr. Rockwell.

"The steady monthly increase in our volume of retail business for the past nine months is also evidence of the fact that the public is learning of the honest value which is built into the entire Nash line.

"This, together with our methods of merchandising, are factors which account for a steady increase during a so-called era of business depression. We are preparing for a continued volume of increased sales during the balance of the present as well as the coming season."

MOTOR TRUCK MAKES U. S. SELF SUSTAINING

Because of the development of the motor truck the United States is relatively self-sustaining in the matter of food supply, declared Francis W. Davis, consulting engineer of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company of Buffalo, in a speech before the Yale and Harvard engineering societies at the Harvard Union.

"Within a few miles of all our great cities there are rich farming and dairying sections, the supplies of which can be handled readily by car and truck," he said.

The efficiency and economy of the motor truck have increased so rapidly in recent years, he said, that the field for their use is enlarging continually. One of the great needs, he declared, was the development of our highway system. Of the two and one-half million miles of road in this country, only 300,000 may be considered available for trucking.

"In the early days it was necessary for trucks to have good roads and avoid steep hills," he said. "The ability of the modern truck to meet difficult road conditions is not generally understood. Today a good truck will grind its way over roads offering great resistance and up hills as steep as 20 per cent."

MIXTURE OF ALCOHOL TO PREVENT FREEZING

Several requests have been made for the proper proportion of denatured alcohol and water to form an anti-freezing solution. A 30 per cent. solution of alcohol will stand temperature down to 10 degrees above zero. For colder weather the percentage is as follows: Zero, alcohol, 40 per cent; 5 degrees below, alcohol, 50 per cent.; 10 degrees below, alcohol, 60 per cent.

It is also well to use a radiator cover and if the car is to be driven in very cold weather a hood is a good protection.

In using the alcohol it is well to remember that it evaporates very easily and more must be added from time to time, especially when more water is used. There are also solutions on the market for this purpose.

Dear Mr. Fix-It: I have 1919 Series 9-B Franklin, which I have had trouble with in vibration. Driving twenty-five miles an hour, vibration starts up and disappears at 30 M. H. I put in a new bearing on pinion shaft, and now I get vibration from 35 M. H., and disappears at 40 M. H. I have been over the differential and I cannot see anything to give me the cause now.—G. B. C., Boston.

This probably comes from the improper adjustment of your pinion and ring gears. It may also come from lack of grease in universal joints, or your clutch may be out of the alignment, or you may have worn journals on your drive-shaft.

Dear Mr. Fix-It: I have a 1921 Ford which is very hard to start after she stands for a few hours. There are good plugs and it seems to get a good spark. I have put on a new carburetor and timer, but it does not make it any easier. Could you tell me where the trouble might be?—J. G., Boston.

This may be due to dirty plugs and timer, or your spark plug points may be improperly adjusted. They should be about the thickness of a thin dime. Your coils may not be vibrating properly, and you may also have dirty oil in the crank case. If you will go over all these carefully you will probably find your trouble.

Dear Mr. Fix-It: As a reader of your column I see you are helping a lot of auto owners who are in trouble, so I am asking you to please help me. I have a 1914 Cross-Country Rambler. When I start it up idle it hits on 4; when I throw it in gear it starts on two cylinders, and when pulling it only hits one, and that's the best it will do. It seems to have very good compression in the cylinders, and there is a Bosch magneto. It has a good spark, but I don't get the spark on the plugs. Please tell me the firing order of that type of car, as I have got it out of time and it is timed 1-2-4-3. I had it timed 1-3-4-2, but it would not go at all when in gear.—G. W. L., Dorchester, Mass.

Your firing order is 1-2-4-3. You must be having either magneto or carburetor trouble. It would seem from your description that your trouble is in your magneto or the wire to the plugs. If you will call up C. P. Rockwell, Inc., and ask for F. E. B., Back Bay 5650, he will be glad to talk further with you on this model.

Dear Mr. Fix-It: I have a Model 45 Oldsmobile. A short while ago the rear bearing in generator overheated and solder ran out of segments where wires are connected to commutator. This has happened twice since, although bearings are O. K. and generator charges at 15 amperes if commutator is kept clean. What causes this trouble? Compression is good in cylinders, and spark plugs do not foul. We average seventeen miles to a gallon of gasoline, but less than forty miles to a quart of oil. After rounding a corner or sharp curve, oil gauge does not show pressure for a few seconds, and engine knocks slightly. The strainer is clean, and I cannot find an air leak. What mileage should we get from oil? Do you think there is a leak in the rear main bearing or between the engine block around the rear main bearing?—I. N. W., Peabody.

Your gasoline mileage is very good, but you should get from sixty-five to seventy-five miles on a quart of oil. The trouble in the generator is that the brushes are worn down so far that the commutator is running on the brush holders, and this would generate a terrific heat and cause the solder to melt. Probably the rear main bearing leaks oil which accounts for the small mileage on the oil. The fact that the oil gauge does not register going around the corner may be due to the fact that the oil "washes" to the side of the crank case, or the oil gauge pipe may be too high.

Dear Mr. Fix-It: I would like to know what's the matter with the rear end of my Ford. Every time I give it the gas there is an awful grinding sound. This morning I jacked the right rear wheel up and started it. The grinding came just the same. Then I took the wheel off, there wasn't any grinding at all. I would like to know if the trouble is in the wheel or the housing.—PUZZLED, East Providence, R. I.

Your trouble is either in your differential or your brakes may be dragging. When you took the wheel off, this either released your brakes or took the weight off the axle. If your differential is worn it will, of course, cause a grinding noise such as you have.

Dear Mr. Fix-It: I have a 1918 model Oakland six-cylinder car that gives me trouble. When car is standing I can speed up with both throttle and accelerator, but when on the road and I step on it, the engine slows down and has no pep. I have had the gasoline pipe, vacuum tank and carburetor overhauled, also engine timed as to firing, but have had no success. I would like to see this letter answered, and oblige. S. E. C., Hull, Mass.

This sounds like weak compression, due either to worn piston rings or leaky valves. Also have carbon removed from your motor. You can tell if your compression is weak by turning your motor over by hand.

Dear Mr. Fix-It: Will you kindly explain to me the cause of a grinding noise in either the clutch or transmission of a Hupp. 1914 model 32; also why does my right rear wheel seem to have less momentum than my left rear wheel when the car is jacked off the ground? There is an intermittent noise from this right rear wheel. I have thought that the noise from it would cause the same noise in clutch or transmission. I have made an adjustment to the driving gear by turning up on the propeller shaft as per instruction book. The noise was there before that, and remains, though seems now to be more constant. Thanking you now, and reminding you that I am a steady reader of your paper, I am, respectfully, "PUZZLED."

This may be due to worn bearings on your pinion shaft or improper adjustment of your gears. It will be necessary to go all over your rear end. If the gears are worn, no adjustment can stop the noise.

Dear Mr. Fix-It: Will you please publish in this Saturday's American how many pleasure cars are registered in Massachusetts, including towns, counties, etc.?—L. L. B., Boston.

There are 259,000 passenger cars registered in the State, 55,000 trucks and 14,000 motorcycles.

OCTOBER SALES UNDER WILLYS SET RECORD

New Distribution Policy Started by Overland Head Proves Huge Success

The Willys-Overland Company has made another new record.

The October sales of Overland and Willys-Knight cars, according to the best figures yet available, were in point of dollars and cents the largest October sales in the history of the company.

"Our dealers," says John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, "have given us concrete evidence of the wisdom of our new sales distribution policy by enabling us to show what appears to be the largest sales last month of any October in our fourteen years in business."

This new distribution policy is one of the most radical moves ever made by an automobile manufacturer. It marks John N. Willys as a still more dominant figure perhaps than ever before in the automobile industry.

Mr. Willys saw opportunity during this period of readjustment boldly to strike out and establish a new method for the sale of Overland and Willys-Knight cars that extends direct factory service to all the dealers and through the dealers to all the purchasers of Overland and Willys-Knight cars throughout the United States.

LICENSE BRANCH AT ARMORY IS URGED

New Bureau Would End Delay Caused by Removal of Department to Pier

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

The removal of the Automobile Department from the State House to Commonwealth Pier has been the topic of conversation along Automobile Row since the change was made, and the change has not met with the approval of the trade.

However, it has been done, and since it is the opinion of the State officials that it should be at the Pier a plan has been suggested which would help matters materially.

A bureau of licenses is now maintained at the State Armory on Commonwealth avenue, where licenses are issued to automobile operators, and if a registration department were also installed whereby it would be possible to obtain licenses for cars, it would not only meet with the approval of the automobile trade, but would greatly benefit the public.

As it now stands a dealer may sell a car for immediate delivery and the customer may wish to drive it away, but if it is necessary to send to Commonwealth Pier for a license, a long delay is inevitable.

When the renewal of licenses begins the traffic congestion in the new quarters at Commonwealth Pier and the streets leading to that section, will be a matter of great concern to the motorists.

When this suggestion of having a branch at the Armory was put to some of the dealers it met with instant approval, and its benefits seem almost obvious.

The logical place for such a registration bureau would seem to be in the centre of that particular business section and the location of the Armory seems to meet these requirements, especially as the State already maintains a department there.

VELIE COMPANY GOING INTO BIGGER QUARTERS

Because of the expansion of its wholesale business on Velie passenger cars, the New England Velie Company finds it necessary to have more commodious quarters. It is also planning to increase its sales organization on the Rainier truck which it distributes for New England and this will require additional space.

In addition to these lines, the New England Velie Company is distributing the Ray two-year unconditional guaranteed storage battery for the entire New England States. For the balance of this month and during December it will devote its entire showroom space at No. 80 Brookline avenue to used cars.

General Motors Trucks

The Economy of Quality

Truck buyers seeking lower cost transportation realize that there can be no substitute for quality. As soon as they discover the sterling qualities they demand and get in GMC Trucks they determine that there is no substitute for GMC.

This accounts for the fact that the more true economy is sought, the more GMC Trucks are sold, which is just as significant as it is true. They are made in all capacities from ¾ to 5 ton. GMC Trucks have the stuff in them which results in their ability not only to do more work, more satisfactorily but to keep on doing it. They represent economy in its most desirable form—the economy of quality and more—

The recent reduction of $500 makes the Model K-16 one ton truck one of the most attractive purchases in the field today.

—and the GMC Truck today is a better truck than it ever was—built of truck units strictly for truck duty—including in its regular equipment electric lights, starter and cord tires.

In addition it has all those exclusive GMC features such as removable Cylinder Walls, removable Valve Lifter assemblies, Dual Cooling and many more.

NAVY'S BIGGEST BATTLESHIP LAUNCHED

West Virginia, Pride of the United States, Is One of Those to Be Junked

By Associated Press.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Launched as one of the proudest and greatest battleships ever designed by the American navy, only to be scrapped within a few months, appeared to be the fate of the super-dreadnough West Virginia today when she slipped from the ways of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company.

The American naval reduction plan as presented to the armament conference provides for the scrapping of the West Virginia. If the American plan is agreed to, the dreadnought, today about 65 per cent. complete, will never be finished and never plow the seas bearing the Stars and Stripes.

The West Virginia is one of the same class and power as the Maryland, soon to be commissioned. Somewhere among government stores are eight sixteen-inch rifles made especially to fit her four gun pits.

She would be able when completed to steam at almost a twenty-three-knot speed; she is built so as to be almost invulnerable to torpedo attack; she carries a bulk of the hardest armor ever rolled, so thick that a man might walk on its upper edge where it protrudes beyond the skin of the ship, well above the water line.

No device that American genius or war experience has combined to produce has been omitted from the ship's fighting equipment.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Many Entertainments Accompany Big Football Game

By BETTY ALDEN.

The Harvard-Yale struggle for football supremacy today is bringing on with it a veritable deluge of entertainments of all sorts. Boston's smart set has planned no end of dances, dinner-parties, teas and house-parties to make the week-end an unusually merry one.

There will be much visiting to and fro, as many former Bostonians are taking this opportunity of stopping for awhile in the Hub and seeing their relatives and friends. Among the latter group are Mr. and Mrs. James Cummings Barr of New York who have a host of connections here. Mr. Barr, a graduate of Harvard, class of '90, still retains his membership in the exclusive Union Club of Boston. He is also a member of the University and Harvard Clubs of New York.

During their stay in the Hub Mr. and Mrs. Barr, whose residence in Gotham is at No. 11 East Sixty-eighth street, are stopping at the Copley-Plaza. Naturally the former Laila Griffith and her husband are displaying not a little interest in the presentation of their relative, Miss Ethel Cummings, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cummings (Lydia Paine) of Joy street, are introducing their daughter with a large dance. Ethel Cummings, by the way, has already won for herself the distinction of being elected debutante chairman of the Junior League's provisional group of newly-elected members. Naturally, the holding of this office signifies wide popularity among the younger set upon the part of holder of the office, as well as a sensible head.

Following the game and its attendant festivities, Mr. and Mrs. Barr will visit their cousin, Mrs. James Barr Ames, widow of the former dean of the Harvard Law School, of Frisbie place, Cambridge. I recall that not so long ago, in fact, only last month, Mr. and Mrs. Barr came over to Boston for the wedding of Katharine Crosby and Robert Burnett Choate, which was solemnized on the 15th of October in St. John's Church, Beverly Farms. Decidedly was the Crosby-Choate wedding one of the most widely-paragraphed nuptial events of the Summer and Fall season, due to the many distinguished connections of the younger couple who are now honeymooning in the Orient.

Apropos of the Harvard-Yale festivities, a gay assemblage of undergraduates and buds of the first family contingent attended the annual Harvard-Yale football dance given last night at the Harvard Union. The committee in charge secured the following prominent matrons to comprise their list of patronesses for the event:

Mrs. Joseph Adamowski, Mrs. Charles F. Adams, Mrs. Frederick L. Allen, Mrs. George P. Baker, Mrs. Robert M. Baker, Mrs. S. Arthur Bent, Ms. Frederick J. Bradlee, Mrs. Charles Brewer, Mrs. Le Baron R. Briggs, Mrs. J. S. Bryant, Mrs. Walter S. Burke, Mrs. Charles M. Cabot, Mrs. William B. Cabot, Mrs. Louis Chauvenet, Mrs. Asaph Churchill, Mrs. Arthur L. Chute, Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Mrs. Frederick J. Cotton, Mrs. William T. Councilman, Mrs. George W. Cram, Mrs. Edgar Crocker, Mrs. Charles K. Cummings, Mrs. Colman W. Cutler, Mrs. William Duane, Mrs. William Dupee, Mrs. Howard E. Forbes, Mrs. Horace L. Frazer, Mrs. Russell T. Fry, Mrs. Robert Grant, Mrs. Chester N. Greenough, Mrs. Robert B. Greenough, Mrs. N. Penrose Hallowell, Mrs. Paul M. Hamlen, Mrs. Franklin Hammond, Mrs. Josiah Hill, Mrs. Clement S. Houghton, Mrs. Hector J. Hughes, Mrs. Edward H. James, Mrs. Reginald M. Johnson, Mrs. Alexander Ladd, Mrs. William Lawrence, Mrs. David M. Little, Jr., Mrs. A. Lawrence Lowell, Mrs. Matthews Luce, Mrs. W. S. Martin, Mrs. F. S. Mead, Mrs. R. B. Merriman, Mrs. Edward C. Moore, Mrs. John F. Moors, Mrs. Harold Murdock, Mrs. Edith P. Musgrave, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, Mrs. Thomas N. Perkins, Mrs. Theodore Richards, Mrs. Montgomery Rollins, Mrs. James S. Russell, Mrs. G. A. Sagendorph, Mrs. Hugh D. Scott, Mrs. Phillip S. Sears, Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Mrs. William B. Stearns, Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., Mrs. William R. Thayer, Mrs. George W. Vaillant, Mrs. Robert de C. Ward, Mrs. Paul B. Watson, Mrs. Thomas R. Watson, Mrs. Edward A. Whitney, Mrs. Ellerton P. Whitney, Mrs. George Wigglesworth, Mrs. Oliver E. Williams, Mrs. Frederick Winsor and Mrs. Lothrop Withington.

The public is asked not to forget the huge benefit performance which is to be given next Tuesday evening in the Colonial Theatre under the auspices of the Community Service in aid of disabled war veterans.

People of prominence in civic, social and theatrical circles are planning to make this event a success in every way, and already a dazzling array of "headliners" have been procured for the occasion. An added feature of the benefit will be the vending of flowers during the performance by a group of about twenty-five "debbies" some of whom will serve also as ushers.

Among the flower girls for Tuesday evening is Miss Eleanor Parker, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stanley Parker of Brookline, who will have as a few of her co-workers the Misses Nina Fletcher, Katherine Gray, Nancy Vose, Margaret Grannis and Jean Cotton.

Among the patronesses who have lent their names for the entertainment are Mesdames John C. Gray, Leverett Tuckerman, 2nd, Alexander Whiteside, Francis B. Crowninshield, John E. Thayer, George S. Mumford, Oliver Ames, Jr., Henry Cabot, Amory A. Lawrence, John Silsbee Curtis, Frederick S. Whitehall, S. V. R. Crosby, Harold J. Coolidge and Russell Codman.

MURPHY URGES DEVELOPMENT OF PORT

Calls for Campaign to Solicit Export Business From West

A definite program for development of the export business of the port of Boston, on which the prosperity of the city depends to a great extent, was last night discussed by John R. Murphy at his campaign rallies, held in East Boston.

The basis of the program, Mr. Murphy said, is to put the city itself into the active business of persuading shippers in every section of the country to send their products here for shipment abroad. Boston's splendid harbor and its dockage facilities need to be explained to them, he said, together with the outstanding fact of all that our port is a day nearer Europe than any competing American port. He said:

"Europe sees in us what some of our own shipbuilders have failed to see, namely, that it is to their advantage to ship from this port. We are a day nearer to Europe than any other large port, which is a mighty essential advantage. Nearness to trade reduces the cost of doing business and ought to reduce the cost of living.

"I wonder how many of our big shippers of the Mid-West know these important facts? The value of them, once they are told, should be plainly evident. I conceive it to be the duty of the city of Boston to establish an official city agency that would pursue an aggressive policy of soliciting business for us. Let us begin with the slogan, 'Ship from Boston. Save a Day.'"

Pelletier Attacks "Rule of the Dead Hand"

Continuing his charges that the political machinery of the city of Boston is controlled by an "invisible government," District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, speaking in the Municipal Building at Roslindale, declared that attacks which are made on him emanate from the Union Club.

"I assert that in the nature and direction of the open propaganda to destroy me and the people I represent, the Union Club is the source of inspiration," he asserted.

The district attorney attacked the "Rule of the Dead Hand," which term he applied to the manner in which he said descendants of wealthy Bostonians of a generation ago have secured control of the city government."

Baxter Ridicules Charge He Is Curley Agent

A bitter attack of former Fire Commissioner John R. Murphy was launched by Charles S. Baxter, mayoralty candidate, who addressed a meeting of the Andrian Club in Intercolonial Hall. Baxter ridiculed Murphy's charges that he, Baxter, is in the campaign as an agent of former Mayor James M. Curley, and asserted that neither Murphy nor Curley is the man to give Boston a good municipal government during the next four years.

O'Connor Would Improve Hyde Park Car Service

Charles S. O'Connor, speaking in Waverley Hall, Hyde Park, declared that, if elected mayor of Boston, he would seek to have the license of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway revoked, and would endeavor to secure for Hyde Park better service from the Boston Elevated.

Hyde Park, he continued, has never been given a square deal since it was annexed to Boston. He added that his candidacy was the only one that promised just treatment to sections of the city where homes predominate.

HUB POLICE HELP ASKED IN DEATH OF WOMAN

Boston police have been asked by Springfield authorities to assist in the identification of the body of an elderly woman who was killed by an automobile Thursday night there, and whose name is still unknown.

It is believed that she came from Boston or Eastern Massachusetts. Every effort that has been made in Springfield to discover her name or place of residence has failed. She died at Mercy Hospital a few minutes after the accident, without regaining consciousness long enough to give her name.

The woman, police say, was struck and run over by an automobile operated by Louis J. Powers, Jr., son of the president of the Powers Paper Company, residing at No. 116 Pearl street, Springfield. The accident occurred at Main and State streets in that city.

Court Rules Railway Need Not Deliver on Sunday

New York, Nov. 19.—"Sunday is a day of relaxation and refreshment, if not public worship. It is a sanctified holiday," Justice Laughlin of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court ruled. The opinion was rendered in a suit of the Cereal Products Company against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company for $4,070, demanded because of damage to 740 bags of malt shipped from Wisconsin to Weehawken. The carrier, it was claimed, caused damage to the malt by delaying delivery over Sunday. The opinion in effect upheld the carrier.

$25,000 DRUG RAID BY POLICE IN ROXBURY

Morphine and Cocaine Found Concealed in Trunks; One Arrest Made

A drug seizure said to be one of the biggest in the history of the Boston police was made by a raiding party sent to a house in Roxbury to search for some missing trunks.

Morphine and cocaine valued at over $25,000 were found when the officers, becoming suspicious, opened two trunks they found in the house.

A man who gave his name as Anthony Farino, of No. 43 Howard street, was placed under arrest charged with having drugs in his possession, when he came to claim ownership of the trunks. Another man was later arrested and held for investigation. Inspectors have gone to New York in an effort to trace shipment of the trunks.

OTIS SKINNER IN IBANEZ DRAMA

Greatest Romantic Actor to Appear in Role of a Spanish Toreador

Otis Skinner is our greatest romantic actor.

What, you ask, is a romantic actor?

It is an actor who wears a fancy costume, with a lot of color in it. It's an actor with a big voice and a gift for gesticulation. In fact it is an actor who can charm you in any costume except street clothes and a derby hat.

Hark back. Remember haw splendid Skinner was in "The Honor of the Family"? French army costumes of a century ago.

Think of him as the beggar in "Kismet." Arabian costume. Lots of color.

Recall him as Tony, the organ grinder of a couple of seasons ago. Red kerchief around his neck, loud trousers and a monkey.

And now he comes in Spanish costume, a Toreador, no fess, in a dramatization of the great novel by Ibanez, "Blood and Sand," and we know in advance that our greatest romantic actor will be very great and very romantic.

English Opera in the Original Tongue.

It's a curious thing that the only opera of the English repertory which has survived the passing generations should be the product of an Irishman, Michael Balfe. Such is the fact. Balfe's "Bohemian Girl" is the sole surviving representative of quite a prolific school of English grand operas of the first half of the nineteenth century. They were known as ballad operas because their scores were nothing but strings of ballads, quite lacking in the dramatic qualities of a modern operatic score.

One other opera of the same type but from a German source has come down from the same period, "Martha," composed by Flowtow, but owing its popularity entirely to the fact that the German had taken an Irish song, "The Last Rose of Summer," and used it as his main theme.

"The Bohemian Girl" will be sung at the Arlington Theatre next week, rather a contrast from the heavy Wagnerian effort of the present week. Its lovely airs, "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls," "The Heart Bowed Down," "The Fair Land of Poland" and "The Gypsy Bride" make it ever popular.

And for once the opera in English company at the Arlington will sing an opera in the language in which it was written, which happens to be English.

Making Heroes Out of Rogues.

"——But 'twas one of the gang
Of that dirty Robert Ford
That shot Jesse James on the sly."
—From a song of the Middle West.

The corn lands and much of the great Southwest now celebrate with this partisan melody the one great bad man of the Mississippi Valley. Jesse James is a hero to those who sing in the moonlight, or to those who entertain at Sunday picnics in pleasant groves up and down the midlands. Robin Hood is not only the romantic ideal of sedentary adults today, but the chronicles of his outlawry are handed down to the children of this generation colored most rosily. The Ohio River has Morgan, the raider, partially heroized; Scotland, of course, has Black Douglas established, and King Leopold's red-marked trail into the rubber lands has been glorified as his enlightenment of Africa.

The bad men of the past become the good men of history—"The good is oft interred with their bones."

You will turn these old things over in your mind as you observe Holbrook Blinn at the Plymouth these nights helping to build up the legend of Pancho Villa, the hero. If in time Villa, the raider, and Villa's terrible men are such favorites as are now the outlaws, Frank and Jesse James, they will have Porter Emerson Browne and Holbrook Blinn to thank, for there can be no two ways about it. "Lopez" in "The Bad Man" is no one but Villa, the genial rascal. Sophisticated though they are, these artists, Browne and Holbrook Blinn, and, tongued though their cheeks may be, as they tell you Lopez is gallant, brave, courteous, chivalric, wise, just and kind, you believe just that.

Started in a Little Cafe.

Miss Marjorie Gateson, well remembered in Boston for her appearance in "The Little Cafe" and "Little Simplicity," is now at the Tremont Theatre, this time in support of John Charles Thomas.

Miss Gateson began her theatrical experience in the Klaw & Erlanger production of "The Little Cafe," in which she had a minor role and the opportunity to understudy Miss Hazel Dawn. Then came another minor part and a season as understudy in "Around the Map." She then was engaged for a leading part in "Have a Heart," which incidentally was one of the first productions staged in America by Edward Royce, who is responsible for the staging of "The Love Letter."

Life Insurance for Elephants

That's the latest. John Robinson's Military Elephants appearing in Shubert vaudeville at the Majestic Theatre the coming week have just been insured with Lloyd's for a total of $40,000—$10,000 for each elephant—Tilly, the only talking elephant in the world whose vocabulary is limited to "papa," incidentally the oldest elephant appearing before the public, Clara, Petite and Tony. These Asiatic elephants are all more than a century old and Tilly is 135 years.

According to the terms of the policy, the life feature will continue for only ten years. If any one of the animals dies from disease or accident within that time, Mr. Robinson will get $10,000. The policy also carries an accident clause which provides for $100 a week for Mr. Robinson in the event that any one of the animals is injured sufficiently to prevent it from doing the act. If the injury is inflicted in a train accident, the amount will be $200 per week.

HOLDING IN FAIRBANKS' FILM

The part of Buckingham in "The Three Musketeers" is played by Thomas Holding, one of the most noted actors of the stage and screen. Holding was born in London in 1882 anad started his theatrical carreer there in 1900 at the Avenue Theatre with Charles Hawtrey as an understudy in "The Message from Mars." He played there in "The Cansy Sally," "In the Soup" and "Tom, Dick and Harry." He came to this country as leading man for Billy Burke, under management of Charles Frohman, in "Love Watches." He also appeared with Maxine Elliott, played "Weaker Sex" and "The Chaperon." Under direction of Oliver Morosco, Holding played in "Peg o' My Heart" and "Elsa Ryan." He played for thirty-eight weeks in "Ben Hur" under direction of Klaw & Erlanger. In 1914 Holding for the first time appeared in pictures, going to Rome to play opposite Pauline Frederick in "The Eternal City." He stayed with Miss Frederick for a year, and since then has appeared in the following other pictures: With Marie Doro in "The White Pearl," with Madame Petrova for four pictures, three with Bessie Barriscale, with Dorothy Dalton, Louise Glaum and several all-star casts. Holding's last picture was Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy." He can be seen in "The Three Musketeers" at the Globe Theatre.

"THE NIGHT CAP"

The offering at the Wilbur Theatre beginning November 28th will be a new mystery comedy, "The Nightcap," presented by Max Marcin, the author-producer, who has already given New York one of the biggest comedy hits of last season in "Three Live Ghosts."

McISAAC says that

FLORENCE REED in "The Mirage," by Edgar Selywn, gives a very skillful performance in a play of more than usual merit, dealing with a daring subject. Park Theatre.

"THE ROSE GIRL," one of the brightest and most melodious operettas of the year, moves out of the Wilbur at the end of the coming week.

"THE BAD MAN," at the Plymouth, with Holbrook Blinn as a Mexican bandit, is one of the most ingenious and amusing satires in years.

"TWO LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE" is proving at the Colonial that some things can come back, for this return engagement is even more profitable than the original.

"THE LOVE LETTER," in which John Charles Thomas is starring at the Tremont, is an operetta of unusual character, fine singing and gorgeous settings.

THE BIG FILMS

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS," Douglas Fairbanks' greatest picture, continues to draw heavily at the Globe.

"OVER THE HILL" leaves the Tremont Temple after a very long run, at the end of this week.

CHANCE TO COMPOSE OPERA

The management of the Boston Society of Singers are offering a prize of $1,000 for the best opera (grand or comic) composed by an American composer. The full details of the offer, the names of the judges, etc., will be announced in a few weeks. Briefly, compositions may be submitted to the management at any time. Every one will be carefully gone over and those deemed worthy of consideration will be submitted to the judges. If in their judgment one is found worthy of production, a prize of $1,000 will be paid to the composer and a production made at the end of the regular season and term of royalty stipulated. The contest is open to all American composers, amateur and professional, the only condition being, as stated, America.. citizenship.

BORDONI TO HEAD BILL AT KEITH.S

Irene Bordoni, queen of the musical comedy stage, and an international star, will head the program at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in a cycle of American, French and Spanish popular songs. Miss Bordoni has a complete new line of the latest Parisian fashions which she displays upon her inimitable figure, and her charming voice is reported as in the best of condition.

'CONFLICT' TO BE SHOWN AT PARK

"Conflict," the Universal-Jewel production, starring the dramatic Priscilla Dean, the feature picture at the Park Theatre next week, is an intense study of human emotions, and is a story which is bound to satisfy the fans of this popular star.

Hundreds of people recently read the story in the Red Book Magazine as it appeared in serial form from the pen of Clarence Budington Kelland.

Stuart Paton, director of "Reputation," produced "Conflict," and the picture is presented with an unusually able cast, among the leading players being the popular Herbert Rawlinson, who has the chief supporting role; Edward Connelly, Hector Sarno, Martha Mattox, L. C. Shumway, Sam Allen, Captain C. E. Anderson, Milton Brown and Bill Gillis.

"What is the noblest kind of love?" The question is suggested by the new Betty Compson production, "For Those We Love," which is the other feature.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

Sensing the pulse beat of his overflowing clientele, Manager McArdle of the Somerville Players, again demonstrates his keen showmanship in the announcement that for the coming week his skilled organization will present an elaborate revival of James A. Herne's comedy classic, "Shore Acres." The revival of this appealing play, which has long ago established its right to be ranked as one of the truly great classics of the American stage, will prove a welcome attraction for the Thanksgiving season. There are few theatregoers of the present day or of the past generation unfamiliar with this great New England play.

LUMBER JACKS PLEASE MISS DEAN

"No one who ever saw a hungry lumberjack devour his noon meal could fail to marvel at the capacity and the power of the human stomach to withstand terrible punishment," declared Priscilla Dean when she returned from a trip to Canada, where her Universal company, under the direction of Stuart Paton, filmed scenes for "Conflict," her newest Universal-Jewel production, now being shown at the Park Theatre.

"Do you know," she continued, "that even now I find myself reaching across the table for a slice of bread.

"A Canuck lumberjack can eat faster, say less and devour more food in a given length of time than any form of life, with the possible exception of the mountain goat.

"It is really a treat to see those men eat. The noonday meal consists of bread, soup, meat, more bread, more meat and a little more soup. A band of savages have nothing on these famished lumberjacks when they come plowing up the dirt road, yelling and fighting to see who shall be first to dive into the soup.

"With a terrible roar, they scurry into the wooden mess hall and fight for their rights; huge loads of bread are stacked around the table. A mad scramble of flying arms and crunching jaws and the bread has disappeared. Then comes a steak that a good-sized lion couldn't gulp down in three meals without an attack of dyspepsia. In two minutes the entire meat supply has vanished."

WALDRON'S CASINO.

Joseph K. Watson and Will H. Cohan, heading a big company of entertainers in Barney Gerard's burlesque production, the "Girls de Looks" will be the attraction at Waldron's Casino this week.

PENSION FUND BEAUTIFUL PROGRAM

Tschaikowsky's masterpiece, the "Pathetic" Symphony, No. 6, which is regarded not only as the greatest achievement of this composer, but as one of the foremost artistic works of Russia, will occupy the first portion of the 40th Pension Fund concert to be given by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 under its regular conductor, Pierre Monteux.

The latter part of the program will be entirely occupied by the three best known tone poems of Richard Strauss, the great composer, who is now visiting this country. They will be the dramatically impressive works, "Death and Transfiguration" and "Don Juan," and the humorous rondo, "Till Eulenspiegel." Surely three more brilliant scores could scarcely be found in the entire repertory of modern symphonic music.

"MR. PIM PASSES BY"

A. L. Erlanger will present "Mr. Pim Passes By," the delightful comedy by A. A. Milne, at the Hollis Street Theatre, Monday, December 5th. With Miss Laura Hope Crews heading a really fine company of players, this Theatre Guild success has gained unusual favor. It is not difficult to understand the remarkable vogue of this comedy in London and New York.

THREE FAIRBANKS HOLIDAY SHOWS

NEW CENTRAL THEATRE OPENS

Handsome Movie House Just Built in Somerville to Show First Run Plays

The opening of the new Central Theatre located on Highland avenue, Somerville, at Central street, takes place on next Monday evening. It is the most elaborate and pretentious theatre in the city, will be most suspicious in as much as many distinguished city and State officials will attend. The construction of the Central Theatre, has been carried out with absolutely no regard to its cost, with a result that the theatre is equipped with every facility for the comfort and convenience of its patrons. Its color scheme is in old rose and ivory. The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,100, 700 of which are on the lower floor and the remainder in the balcony. A huge pipe organ of multiple instruments has been installed which will be utilized for the accompaniment of the feature photoplays, announced as the policy to be conducted by the management. The theatre will be devoted exclusively to the showing of first run double feature photoplays, a Pathe news illustrating the latest world events, topics gleaned from the latest happenings, a new comedy and a high-class vocalist. The program will be changed on Monday and Thursday of each week. The opening photoplay will be that sterling actor H. B. Warner, in the absorbing photodrama "Dice of Destiny."

Florence Reed on Music in Films.

Florence Reed's musical ability is second only to her histrionic gifts and she has utilized it in "The Mirage" to prove the value of music to express the varying mode of a heroine.

In the second place she has been for several years an active worker in the movement for better music in the moving picture houses.

"The value of appropriate music for motion pictures is inestimable," Miss Reed says. "Recognition of this fact has had phenomenal growth in the past few years as we all know.

"I, myself, have had occasion to learn the great value of music in expressing the varying moods of a character in my impersonation of Rene Moreland in "The Mirage," Edgar Selwyn's play now appearing at the Selwyn Theatre. I have found music more subtle than speech in portraying the moods of Rene Moreland. The human vocabulary could never quite so potently reveal the emotions of this suffering woman as the musical motifs which I have selected to portray them during the progress of the story.

And His Name Was John.

Shep Camp of "The Rose Girl" tells a new John McCormack story of the "Rose Girl." Here it is:

"About eight or ten years ago there was a young Irishman in London who had nothing but a lovely voice to bless himself with. Once a week, at the Sunday afternoon musicale in the Midland Hotel, he received a pound for singing a number of songs. This pound a week was all there was between him and starvation. A friend of mine gave the Irish lad a letter of introduction to the stage manager of the Gaiety when they were puting on a piece called 'The Good Miss Hughes.' The Irish boy applied for a place in this chorus. His voice was tried and the stage manager found it wanting. He was turned down because he couldn't sing. This happened on a Sunday morning. The Irish boy went straight from the theatre to the hotel where he was to sing that afternoon. He was crushed and broken-hearted and turned for consolation to the young man who played his accompaniments. Having heard the story, this man, whose name was Marshall, slapped him on the back and said: 'Never mind, old man; next time your luck will turn. By the way, I've written a little song for you. You can learn it in no time and sing it this afternoon. It is called, "I Hear You Calling Me." And the Irish lad who sang the song that afternoon so brilliantly that it made him the talk of London, was John McCormack."

They Don't Speak as They Pass.

Jack Donahue, the limber-jointed comic of "Two Little Girls in Blue" company at the Colonial, confesses that like many other members of his profession, he is superstitious.

"When I was courting my wife I had a rival. Every Sunday night when I would call on her this rival guy was there, and the foxy gink would always give me a present, such as a stick-pin or a pearl-handled knife and though I insisted he would not take a penny for them. I told him it would cut our friendship, and sure enough, I married the girl we were both courting, and now I don't speak to him.

"I knew it would give me hard luck. He gave me barber's hair clippers and nail clippers at various times. I thought that rather personal. I retaliated by giving him a dozen of those old-fashioned stock ties—they were very wide if you remember. His shirt was always stained,and these ties would hide the entire shirt. You could always tell what he had been eating by looking at his shirt and vest.

"If you walk under a ladder it's bad luck. Once I walked under a ladder where a man was painting. The paint fell on me and ruined my black suit. I had t obuy another black suit. You see I was in mourning."

A SHIP SANDWICH! The Tomson twins and Evelyn Law in a shipboard scene in "Two Little Girls in Blue," current at the Colonial. Clever dancers and smart entertainers.

WHO SAID genuine, fragile beauty was absent from burlesque! The Belzar sisters, in "Peek-a-Boo" at the Gayety, disprove this.

EDUARD HOREMANS, Belgian's star billiardist, shone dimly at Chicago championship match. Won one and lost two. (Int.)

WRAP me up two pounds, please! Miss Lily Frankel, whose perfect health won her honors at N. Y. Health Show. Shown holding all the radium in the world, valued at $16,120,000. (W. W.)

GOOD MORNING! Have you used Peach soap? Dorothy Maynard and Natalie Natasson have, 'cause—well, aren't they? In the Rose Girl" at the Wilbur.

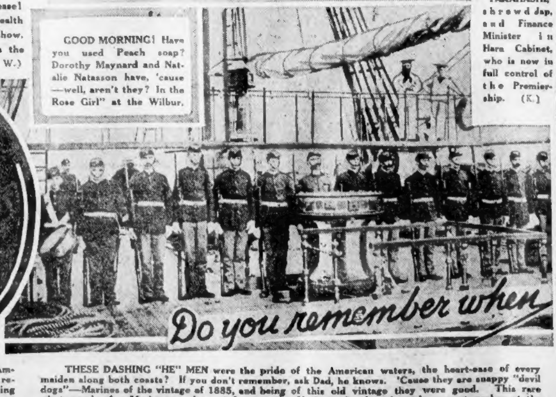
ABRAM I. ELKUS, former Ambassador to Turkey, who is just recovering from an attack of sleeping sickness which occurred last January. (U. & U.)



THESE DASHING "HE" MEN were the pride of the American waters, the heart-ease of every maiden along both coasts? If you don't remember, ask Dad, he knows. 'Cause they are snappy "devil dogs"—Marines of the vintage of 1885, and being of this old vintage they were good. This rare photograph of a Marine guard was taken on the U. S. S. Omaha when she was at anchor at the Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard. (G.)

WANTS TO FIGHT at skyscraper weight! Gan Van Albert, 19 years old, and fresh from Holland, strolled into a Chicago gym and calmly announced that he was going to become a scrapper. Mike Dundee, Jimmy Kelley and Pal Moore, who were working out, said that high altitudes made them dizzy. (U. & U.)

PORTIA under a green cloak! These two women can claim the distinction of being the first to win appointment as barristers in Ireland. Miss M. Kyle (right) and Miss A. K. S. Deverell of Dublin were "called" to practice before the bar by the Lord Chief Justice. (Int.)

Dancing and Gayety at the Restaurants

The Mohawk Dining Room continues to grow in popularity every day. Prices upstairs in the dining room were recently cut down to match the prices of the Mohawk Spa, which has become so popular with business men during the last year.

Today, a special dinner will be served directly following the football battles, particularly for enthusiasts of the gridiron game. The blue of Georgetown and Yale will vie with the red of Boston College and crimson of Harvard, but both will be outshone by the excellence of the dinner, according to Mr. Pini.

Since Leon and Victor Pini, whose delectable dishes made the old Woodcock famous, took charge, the Mohawk System has come forward by leaps and bounds until now the Spa stands as Boston's most popular business men's lunch, and the dining room is running in keen competition for the favor of the public.

The new Mohawk singing orchestra will be heard tonight for the first time.

Chef at the Mohawk Spa.

EGYPTIAN ROOM

The Hotel Brunswick, with its famous Egyptian supper room, was one of the most brilliant spectacles imaginable, due to the addition of hundreds of football visitors to the regular patrons. The music of the Egyptian room, provided by Reismann's orchestra, is famous all over the country; in fact Reismann's graphophone records are now being sold everywhere. Two or three times as many people were turned away as could be accommodated, though the Egyptian room is the largest restaurant in Boston.

From early evening until late at night the dancing floor was crowded with the beauty and chivalry of half a dozen great cities.

The Hotel Lenox was also a tremendous favorite with football folk, and as usual drew a great multitude of Yale sympathizers. Here there was jubilation. Tonight both these resorts are booked solid. The Egyptian room, however, is almost always filled to capacity, even on nights when the rest of the town is quiet.

ALEXANDER'S ROTISSERIE

A new departure for Boston is Alexander's Rotisserie at No. 245 Tremont street. Though it has been open only ten days, it is already exceedingly popular, particularly with theatrical people, for it is located in the heart of the theatre district. The installation, near the window, of a huge charcoal roasting apparatus, with half a dozen chickens turning on the automatic spits, has had a great deal to do with the quick jump in popularity of the new cafe.

AMERICAN HOUSE RATHSKELLER

This famous resort, the first of its kind in Boston, expects the biggest night in its history tonight, for its large capacity is already taxed. People differ in tastes, but good eating is an essential and rathskeller food has a flavor all its own.

The music of the Rathskeller is worthy of special mention. There are two orchestras, a Maraimba band from Central America and a comic jazz band. There is an exceptionally spacious dancing floor and the crowding, which makes restaurant dancing frequently unpleasant, does not prevail here.

A special Thanksgiving dinner is preparing under the personal attention of A. C. Jones, the proprietor, whose management of the Rathskeller keeps it exceedingly high class. The cozy, semi-privacy of the dining room, with its many comfortable booths, is another feature which appeals. It is especially popular after the theatre for the music continues until 1 a. m.

GRAND GARDEN

The big football game being here today, the Grand Garden Restaurant, No. 660 Washington street, is making special preparations to provide for the big crowd. A special menu is to be arranged so that the guests may be able to obtain the Oriental delicacies aside from the American style dishes served at the Grand Garden. One of the big features tonight will be a special orchestra engaged to play for the dancing and high class cabaret.

AT THE FRASCATI

The management of the Frascati Restaurant has been busy all the week preparing to serve its patrons after the great game today. A special "Foot Ball Dinner De Luxe" has been prepared in anticipation of the crowds which will throng this popular restaurant. Under supervision of the famous Italian chef, Charles Di Sciullo, the cuisine of the Frascati has made a reputation among those who appreciate good cooking served in proper manner.

A real Thanksgiving dinner with all the "fixin's" will be served next Thursday.

EVER POPULAR BALFE OPERA NEXT WEEK

The Boston Society of Singers will present for the seventh week of their season of opera in English at the Arlington Theatre the popular ballad opera, "Bohemia Girl," by Michael Balfe, the gifted Irish composer.

"The Bohemian Girl" is one succession of beautiful ballads, with such numbers as "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls," "The Heart Bowed Down," "Then You'll Remember Me," "Bliss Forever Past," etc., it is safe to say "Bohemian Girl" will be loved the world over as long as music exists. The Boston Society of Singers is making a fine production of "The Bohemian Girl" and presenting it with a cast of unusual excellence. Norman Arnold will sing the role of the Thaddeus, the exiled Polish officer; Helena Mirrill will be the Arline stolen by the gypsies and afterward restored to her father; Stanley Deacon and Robet Henry Kelly will alternate as the unhappy father, while the gypsy chief Devilshoof will be in the hands of Mr. Waterous and Mr. Orchard. Elva Boyden will be back in the cast as the Queen of the Gypeles, alternating the role with Stella De Mette, and Mr. Northway, whose excellent comedy was a feature of Manon, will play Florentine, the young dandy.

PEOPLE'S SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The People's Symphony Orchestra, seventy players, Emil Mollenhauer, conductor, will give its fifth concert of the season Sunday afternoon at 3:30 at the Arlington Theatre.

Miss Helen Allyn, coloratura, prima donna, of the Boston Society of Singers, will be the assisting artist.

ALL-STAR MATINEE

Stars and attractions from all local theatres will form a program of noteworthy quality to be given at the Colonial Theatre next Tuesday afternoon in aid of the disabled service men in Boston hospitals. In many respects it will be one of the greatest theatrical bills ever presented in Boston.

Among the artists who will positively appear are John Charles Thomas, Fred and Adele Astaire, and Charles Judels of "The Love Letter" company; Holbrook Blinn, Otis Skinner; Fred Hillebrand, A. Barbour Halliday and Shep Camp of "The Rose Girl" company; the Fairbanks Twins, Jack Donahue, Vanda Hoff, Evelyn Law, Jack Squire, Garrett Carroll, Emma Janvier, Yra Jeane, Jack and Tommy Tomson, George Mack, Dorothy Harrison and the entire ensemble of the "Two Little Girls in Blue" company.

NEW STAR IN SOMERVILLE

Manager McArdle, of the Somerville Players, announces that he has engaged Miss Jessamine Newcomb, formerly an important and valued member of the Henry Jewett Players. Miss Newcomb's work is well known in this city. Her debut will be made on Monday matinee, November 28, appearing in the leading role of a tremendously human play, to be announced later in the week.

Vaudeville Singer Who Plans Career in Grand Opera

YVETTE RUGEL

She has been playing at Keith's this week, and recently returned from a successful tour of Europe. (Photo by Hixon-Connelly Studio.)

Vaudeville's loss will be grand opera's gain when Yvette Rugel, the tiny girl with the beautiful soprano voice, goes after Galli Curci's laurels.

Miss Rugel, who has been playing at Keith's all week, had been afraid for years that her small stature would prevent her making a success in grand opera, but she has been assured by one of the biggest impresarios in the country that small women who can sing are now greatly desired.

The reason is that the present day flock of tenors runs small, and the average prima donna makes two of the singer she is supposed to be in love with.

She has just returned from London and Paris where she had a big success in the music halls.

LONDON STRING QUARTET

The London String Quartet recital announcement has created quite a stir in Boston musical circles. One school alone has reserved seventy-five seats. The morning after the first mention of this concert brought a number of requests for tickets, and so it may safely be presumed, wonder of wonders, that even in this day of mundane things, a good audience will await the Londoners.

SECOND ANNUAL THEATRICAL BALL

Rapid progress is being made by the committee in charge of the second annual theatrical ball given by the Theatrical Stage Employes, Local No. 11, of Boston, announced to take place on Thursday evening, January 19, at Mechanics Building. The committee in charge of this event, which will promise to be one of the most notable of the year, embraces a large number of the employes of the various Boston theatres.

MAJESTIC.

It will be literally a jumbo Shubert Vaudeville bill at the Majestic Theatre this coming week, every afternoon and evening. One of the big headliners will be Hal Forde and Lieutenant Gits Rice. The former was star of "Honeydew," possessor of a fine baritone voice, and the latter made himself famous by his composition of "Dear Old Pal of Mine" and numerous other song hits.

Another headline feature will be Lee White, celebrating her return to her native land, and Clay Smith, in a sparkling repertoire of songs. Of equal importance as a headliner will be Lucille Chalfant, a charming young coloratura soprano who flashed across the operatic horizon a few short months ago and was immediately captured by vaudeville. Her impression of Jenny Lind is a splendid reminder of other days.

GORDON'S SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA

Practically an all-star cast was chosen by George Leone Tucker for "Ladies Must Live," a superb production, which proved to be Mr. Tucker's final achievement. Betty Compson, now a Paramount star, is the featured player in the production, which will be shown at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia Theatre next Monday.

GAYETY THEATRE

Beginning with a matinee performance Monday, burlesque's sensational hit, "Peek-a-Boo," heralded as bigger and better than ever, will open a week's engagement at the Gayety Theatre.

This show, by far the best of the many Jean Bedini burlesque productions, comes to Boston with the reputation of having shattered all popularity records wherever it has played. "Peek-a-Boo" is without doubt, according to many theatrical critics, the most remarkable attraction of its kind ever staged.

APOLLO CLUB

The first concert of the Apollo Club's fifty-first season will be given in Jordan Hall, Wednesday, November 23, at 8 o'clock. In keeping with the club's unexcelled reputation for male part singing, an exceptionally attractive program has been carefully prepared. The assisting soloist is Mrs. Marjorie Warren Leadbetter, soprano. Incidental solos will be sung by E. Lindsey Cummings, tenor; Walter H. Kidder, baritone, and William F. Pollard, tenor, members of the club.

Handel and Haydn Season

A memorable and eventful series of choral concerts is announced by the Handel and Haydn Society for the coming season in Symphony Hall.

The chorus of four hundred is already being trained by Emil Mollenhauer.

Handel's "Messiah" will be the first oratorio, which will have two Christmas performances on Sunday afternoon, December 18, and Monday evening, December 19, with the following quartet of soloists for each performance: Grace Kerns, soprano; Frieda Klink, contralto; Lambert Murphy, tenor, and Fred Patton, bass.

BIG FINANCIAL CONFERENCE PROPOSED

European Nations Want U. S. to Join in Parley Following Arms Meeting

By International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Copyright, 1921, by International News Service

Washington, Nov. 19.—The United States has been approached by certain European nations as to its willingness to engage in a worldwide economic and financial conference to follow the present conference on limitation of armaments and Far Eastern questions.

No definite invitation has thus far been extended, but the administration is "being sounded out" as to its attitude toward such a meeting to be held either in Washington, London or Paris.

It is with such a gathering in prospect that the foreign diplomats now here have carefully refrained from mentioning the subject of foreign in-[illegible] at the present conference.

Wages of 40,000 Men in Packing Plants to Be Reduced

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Wage reductions averaging 10 per cent. will be put into effect in the packing plants of Armour & Co., Swift & Co. and Wilson & Co. on November 28, through an agreement reached at conferences here between officials of the companies and employes.

Approximately 40,000 employes will be affected. The decision was reached after conferences held under the "shop representation plan," recently adopted by the packing plants.

The various labor unions having membership of stockyards workers were not represented as organizations.

MAN CAUGHT IN QUINCY GARAGE BY OFFICER

His Companion Escapes After Patrolman Opens Fire Upon Pair

Two men found in the garage of the Quincy Buick Company early today by Patrolman James Gilmartin, made a desperate fight to avoid arrest, one of them escaping after the policeman had fired three shots. The other was arraigned before Judge Avery in the Quincy District Court charged with breaking and entering. gave his name as John Raymond, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Patrolman Gilmartin saw the men take a pane of glass from a rear window and enter the garage. He ordered them to surrender, but instead one of the men made a dive at another window. Gilmartin opened fire and succeeded in capturing Raymond.

HENRY FORD TO GET BIG MUSCLE SHOALS PLANT

Official Announcement of Acceptance of Offer Expected in a Few Days

Washington, Nov. 19.—The government has favorably received the proposals of Henry Ford to assume control of the Muscle Shoals water-power project for ninety-nine years, it was learned today on high authority.

An official announcement that the government has accepted Ford's offer "in full" can be expected within a few days. The proposals will then go to a vote of Congress, as they involve an appropriation of approximately $40,[illegible].

Ford left Washington early today without having seen Secretry Weeks because of the latter's illness. The manufacturer was in "high spirits" and confident that his business revival of the South would soon be under way.

GEORGETOWN FAVORITE OVER B. C. TEAM IN GRID BATTLE

Georgetown's powerful eleven is all set for the battle with Boston College this afternoon at Braves Field, confident that it will wipe out the defeat of a year ago when the Blue and Gray was trampled in the mud of Braves Field, defeated by a score of 30 to 0.

"Now is the time," is the Georgetown cry, for Coach Exendine's men know that they are in better form today than they were a year ago, and they feel that Cavanaugh's team is not up to last season's standard.

The interest in the B. C.-Georgetown battle is no less enthusiastic among B. C. followers than is the interest in the big game at the Stadium.

Both teams are in excellent shape for the fray, both have creditable records, while in addition the friendly rivalry between these two Jesuit colleges has never yet failed to materialize into a fast and furious battle for first honors.

The Boston College Athletic Association has been swamped with applications for tickets for the game, and a bigger crowd is expected to be present this afternoon than last year, when close to 25,000 thronged the "Home of Big Things."

The comparative record of both teams gives the Southerners the advantage on paper. In seven games

BOSTON COL.	GEORGETOWN
Capt. Comerford, l. e.	r. e., Florence
Kozlowski, l. t.	r. t., Sullivan
J. Doyle, l. g.	r. g., Sheehan
W. Doyle, c.	c., Goggin, Werts
Kelley, r. g.	l. g., Swerney
Paten, r. t.	l. t., Butler
McManus, r. e.	l. e., O'Connell
Donnellan, q. b.	q. b., Dufour
Liston, l. h. b.	r. h. b., Flavin
Matthews, r. h. b.	l. h. b., Malley
Kelleher, f. b.	f. b., Kenyon

Georgetown has rolled up a total of 218 points against its opponents' 41.

B. C. has a point record of 75 against its rivals' 35. Georgetown has met seven fast teams, being defeated but once.

* * *

Fordham and Holy Cross are numbered among the Hilltoppers' victims, and should the B. C. team be defeated, Georgetown would stand as the champion among the Jesuit Colleges of the East.

* * *

Georgetown's offence is characterized by a heavy, fast charging line, a speedy, hard-hitting backfield that excels in end runs. In punting, Georgetown seems to have the edge on Boston College. Flavin, who will do the kicking for the Blue and Gray, is rated as one of the best punters in the South.

Malley, right halfback for the Blue and Gray, is a line plunger of ability. Kenyon, Georgetown fullback, is a star offensive player, who ranks high in the backfield group.

Flavin will be the Georgetown threat. His specialty is shooting around the ends with a speed that is not easily checked. In a broken field Flavin has few equals and should he break loose his stopping point is usually located behind his opponent's goal line.

* * *

Although the Southerners are the slight favorites in the game, Boston College has shown a big improvement in the last two weeks and may upset Georgetown's calculations that the Maroon and Gold team is not in first-class condition.

* * *

The two weeks that intervened between the Marietta game and today's contest have been full of hard work for Cavanaugh's men. For three hours every day, in fair weather or foul, Coach Cavanaugh drilled his men in all departments of the game. The line has been strengthened by the return of Jim Doyle, and has improved greatly in defensive playing.

Keahane has been replaced at tackle by Kozlowski, whose playing in the game against Marietta was remarkable.

Jimmy Liston will start the game at his regular left half post, and is ready to repeat his performance of the Marietta contest. Liston's ability to break through the Georgetown line will count much toward a B. C. victory.

Matthews and Kelleher are in their best form, both keyed to the highest pitch for the best performance of the season.

AMATEUR TITLE GAME AT NEPONSET SUNDAY

Both teams will put their strongest lineup in the game. The Romars will have Donovan, a former St. Anslem star, and Dempsey of B. C., while St. Ann's will have Melody and McCarty of St. John's Prep and Parrotta, formerly of Andover.

"End Your Rheumatism Like I Did Mine"—Says Pastor Reed: Wife Also Rid of Neuritis

Suffered Torture For Years—Now Telling Good News To Others

"Don't Believe That Old Humbug About 'Uric Acid' Being the Cause of Rheumatism—It's Not So!"

Emphatically asserting that thousands of unfortunate sufferers have been led into taking wrong treatments under the old and false belief that "Uric Acid" causes rheumatism, Pastor H. W. Reed says:

"As do some of our highest medical authorities, I now know that 'Uric Acid' never did and never will cause rheumatism! But it took me many years to find out this truth. I learned how to get rid of my rheumatism and recover my health and strength through reading 'The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism,' a work written by an authority who has scientifically studied the cause and treatment of rheumatism for over twenty years. It was indeed a veritable revelation!

"I had suffered agony for years from rheumatism and associated disorders, and Mrs. Reed was tortured with the demon neuritis almost beyond endurance. We had read and talked so much about 'Uric Acid' that our minds seemed poisoned. But the 'Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism' made it all clear to us and now we are both free from the suffering and misery we endured so many years. I believe I was the hardest man in the world to convert! For me to discard the old 'Uric Acid' theory, and what I now know to be absolutely false, for the new, scientific understanding of the causes and cure of rheumatism, was like asking me to change my religious beliefs! But I did change, and it was a fortunate day for me and mine when I did so."

NOTE: "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism" referred to above by Pastor Reed lays bare facts about rheumatism and its associated disorders overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past. It is a work that should be in the hands of every man or woman who has the slightest symptoms of rheumatism, neuritis, lumbago or gout. Anyone who sends name and address to H. P. Clearwater, 426-B Street, Hallowell, Maine, will receive it by mail postage paid and absolutely free. Send now, lest you forget the address! If not a sufferer, cut out this explanation and hand it to some afflicted friend.

New York, Nov. 19.—A crippled Dartmouth eleven reported at the Polo Grounds today for its annual clash with "Chick" Meehan's Syracuse team, but in view of the unimpressive record of the Salt City outfit, many counted on the Green to win despite its handicaps.

George Moore, first string guard, and "Chick" Burke, speedy right halfback, were not scheduled to start the contest for Dartmouth and considerable doubt prevailed as to their ability to play any portion of it, while Captain Jim Robertson, who assumes the difficult roles of offensive halfback and defensive tackle, has not fully recovered from injuries sustained in the Pennsylvania game last week. Although he was named as a starter it was not believed that he would remain in play more than one period.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 19.—With Marshall, Brown's great fullback, ready to start the game after a six weeks' absence from the Bruin lineup, Coach Robinson's team ruled the favorite in its annual clash with Colgate at Andrews Field this afternoon.

Marshall, who hails from Peddie Institute, and is a great punter as well as an excellent line plunging and interference-making backfield man, was expected to add 25 per cent. to the strength of the Brown team, whose men came through last week's Harvard game in fine physical condition.

Today's contest is the final game of the season for Coach Robinson's team, and some wonderful playing by Shurtleff and Gulian, Brown's two candidates for All-America honors, was expected.

WORLD'S RECORD AT BILLIARDS BY COCHRAN

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Willie Hoppe, American, still remains without a peer in the billiard world. The world's champion defeated Ora Morningstar in his match, 400 to 213, and kept his place as the undefeated champion of the world.

Hoppe won in eight innings. Morningstar never had a chance with the champion at any stage of the game, and the titleholder never found need of exerting himself. In the fifth inning, however, he showed a flash of real form, making a run of 82.

The real sensation of the day's playing came when Welker Cochran, Mason City, Ia., boy, shattered the world's record high run with a score of 384. The youthful phenom won from George Sutton, Chicago veteran, 400 to 57.

In the early match between Conti, French star, and Edouard Horemans, the Belgian champion, the Frenchman defeated his opponent in five innings, 400 to 105.

Wolfenden Buys Heather

Attleboro, Nov. 19.—Oscar Wolfenden, owner of the Liberty Bond stables, with such Short Ship Circuit horses as Forrest B., Peter Hopeful and Native Judge, today added Heather, a three-year-old filly with a record of 2:10 on a mile track, to his string. She is sired by Belwin. The mare will pass the Winter with Fred Hyde in North Carolina, and campaign on New England track in 1922.

Says if a Lawyer Wins a Fifty Thousand Dollar Lawsuit He Takes Half, but if You Get Ten Years in Jail You Keep It All

In most professions you have to practice before you can be good, but a lawyer has to be good before he can practice.

Still, when your life is at stake, you hate to have him practicing on you.

If he wins a $50,000 lawsuit he takes half, but if you get ten years in jail you keep it all.

If you're arrested and thrown into a cell, the lawyer comes right down and tells you they can't put you there.

He says he'll have you out in five minutes, and then his watch stops.

The book on the shelf in his office says they can't put you there, but the book on the police sergeant's desk says you are there.

Then he gets [illegible] which book you are going to believe.

* * *

One man was [illegible] for stealing a diamond ring, and he told the lawyer he was innocent. The lawyer asked him how much money he had and the man said "None. All I've got is a diamond ring."

The next day the attorney asked the judge if he would give his client time to make up his mind whether he was guilty or not, and the judge gave him five years.

Then the lawyer went back and said to the prisoner, "You're going to leave here today." The prisoner said, "Really?" and the attorney said "Yes, you're going to Sing Sing this afternoon."

The prisoner got sore because he figured he could have got five years himself without the help of a lawyer.

Then the lawyer went to appeal on a writ, and the crook went to the penitentiary on a train.

One guy was sentenced to be hanged, so you can imagine what he would have got if he hadn't had an attorney.

The lawyer was such a good talker that he had the prisoner thanking him for getting the judge to let him off so easy.

If the attorney hadn't known the judge, the judge might have turned him loose and maybe he'd have been run over by an automobile.

The lawyer had such a wonderful line of talk that before he left the court house the prisoner thanked him for saving his life.

Songs to Cheer the Rival Warriors in Battle

HARVARD.

OUR DIRECTOR.

Hard luck for poor old Eli!
Tough on the Blue;

Now, altogether,
Smash them and break through!
'Gainst the line of Crimson
Yale can't prevail.
Three cheers for Harvard!
And down with Yale!
RAH! RAH! RAH!
(Repeating)
'Gainst the line of Crimson
Yale can't prevail;
Three cheers for Harvard!
And down with Yale!
Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah!
Rah! Rah! Rah!
Harvard! Harvard! Harvard!

HARVARDIANA.

The cheers from the Harvard hosts ring high,
While the Crimson banners streaming;
Lift the Crimson glory to the sky
Where the sunset red is gleaming.
And our hearts beat fast for old Harvard.
To her name shall her sons be ever true
Long live . . . her glorious fame!
Long live . . . her glorious fame!
(Everybody up)
Then STAND and RAISE your banners on high,
ON! on . . . to victory.

SOLDIERS FIELD.

O'er the stands in flaming Crimson
Harvard banners fly,
Cheer on cheer like volleyed thunder
Echoes to the sky.
See! the Crimson tide is turning—
Gaining more and more.
Then fight! fight! fight!
For we win tonight!
Old Harvard forever more!

UP THE STREET.

Look where the Crimson banners fly!
Hark to the sound of tramping feet!
There is a host approaching nigh,
Harvard is marching up the street!
Onward to victory again!
Marching with drum beat and with song,
Oh! hear the refrain!
As it thunders along—as it thunders along!
Behold! they come in view!
Who wear the Crimson hue—
Whose hearts are strong,
Whose hearts are true.
Ever to Harvard! Ever to Harvard!
And Harvard's glory shall be our aim
And through the ages the sound shall roll
When alltogether we cheer her name—
When we cheer her with heart and soul.

YALE.

MOTHER OF MEN.

Mother of men, grown strong in giving,
Honor to them their light have led—
Rich in the toil of thousands living,
Proud of the deeds of thousands dead,
We have felt thy power and know thee,
We whose work thy gifts avail—
High in our herts, enshrined enthrone thee,
Mother of Men, Old Yale!
Spirit of Youth, alive, unchanging,
Under whose feet the years are cast—
Heir to an ageless empire, ranging
Over the future and the past—
Thee whom our fathers loved before us—
Thee whom our sons unborn shall hail—
Praise we today in sturdy chorus,
Mother of Men, Old Yale!

GOOD NIGHT, HARVARD.

Good-night, poor Harvard,
Harvard, good-night.
We've got your number,
You're high as a kite
Oh! Oh! Oh
Good-night, poor Harvard
You're tucked in tight,
When the BIG BLUE
TEAM gets after you,
Harvard, good-night.

BULLDOG.

Bulldog, bulldog, bow, wow, wow, Eli Yale.
Bulldog, bulldog, bow, wow, wow,
Our team can never fail,
When the Sons of Eli break thru the lines
That is the sign we hail,
Bulldog, bulldog, bow, wow, wow, Eli Yale.

BOOLA.

Well, a-here we are!
Well, a-here we are!
Just watch us rolling up the score!
We'll leave Harvard behind so far
That she won't want to play us any more
We'll roll the score so very high
That you will hear them cry:
Well, a Boola Boo,
Well, a Boola Boo,
Boola, Boo, Boola, Boola, Boola, Boo!
Boola, Boola, Boola, Boola,
Boola, Boola, Boola, Boola,
When the Bulldog gets Harvard
She will holler Boola Boo!
Oh, Yale, Eli Yale,

CLINTON WINS VERDICT OVER SAILOR DARDEN

Fall River, Nov. 19.—At the Casino A. A., Johnny Clinton of Boston won the decision over Sailor Darden in a ten-round bout. Clinton won eight out of ten rounds and displayed a brand of boxing seldom seen in this city. The Boston entry for lightweight honors showed that he is capable of giving any lightweight in this country a battle.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 19.—The undefeated Lafayette team swung into its annual battle with Coach Frank Glick's Lehigh eleven today confident of adding another victory to its already long string.

Both teams faced easy opponents last week and the hard-worked regulars, some of whom did not play last Saturday and others of whom remained in their respective games but for short periods, reported in excellent condition for today's contest.

Lafayette, with its excellent first string players and its wealth of able substitutes, ruled the favorite, but Lehigh boasts a very fine team and its supporters expected it to furnish Lafayette with the most difficult opposition the latter has encountered, with a real chance for a Lehigh victory in the event Coach Sutherland's men fail to perform at their best.

Haverhill, Nov. 19.—For the first time this year Haverhill High expects easy opposition with Durfee High of Fall River. Coach Bill Broderick has taken it so lightly that he will atend the Yale-Harvard game and the Brown and Gold squad will be left for Assistant Coach Myron Hagley to direct.

Durfee was beaten by Brockton, 56 to 0, and Haverhill trimmed the rival shoe city, 21 to 13. About the only victory of consequence by Durfee was over Taunton, 21 to 0.

Since Aldrich, now the Yale leader, left the Fall River school the elevens there have been very mediocre.

When the contest was booked last year Haverhill expected a tough ordeal but the affair looks more like a Marathon.

GLOUCESTER IN GAME WITH WINTHROP

Gloucester High has found its stride and should tack defeat on Winthrop which it meets today at the fishermen's town. Coach Burke attributes the recent good showing of his team to the development of the green material, which is for the first time this season getting down to brass tacks.

That 6-to-0 victory over Revere High has instilled the spirit that makes winning teams and Coach Burke has all in readiness for the invasion of Coach Manter and his Winthrop warriors. The line defence, which has been the weakness of the team, is strengthened with the return of three players who have satisfied the school faculty concerning their studies.

"Swede" Olson and Thomas, with Captain Curtis at quarter make a backfield that is capable of holding its own with some of the leading teams in the league. Merchant, playing an end position, has surprised the supporters with his spectacular playing. He was been catching forward passes with consistent accuracy and distinguished himself in the Revere game with his excellent interference.

Saunders, the dusky fullback of the Winthrop eleven, is not showing well this season because of the weak line. His work at Winthrop in the past two years has given that school prominence.

Because of the rivalry that exists between these two teams the banner crowd of the season is expected. The Gloucester Athletic Field will be taxed to it's capacity.

NEWTON PICKED TO WIN SCHOOL TITLE GAME FROM WALTHAM

By FRED C. LANE.

So great has been the demand for Waltham-Newton tickets that school officials have made preparations for additional police protection to handle the largest crowd that ever attended a game at the Waltham Athletic Field. Close to 10,000 spectators will attempt to crowd their way into this enclosure to witness the scholastic football classic of the season today.

The 7,000 tickets put on sale Friday were soon disposed of with the result that not a ticket was available at noon today. Standing room was at a premium at game time. The cause for all this interest in these two teams is the outstanding record that each has made this season.

Newton has practically won the Suburban League championship for the second consecutive year and has so outclassed all opponents, both in and out of the league, that it stands out as the best school boy eleven in New England.

Waltham lacks but a few points to put it on even terms with Newton. Likewise it has not tasted defeat and tied or defeated some of the best organizations in and out of the State. Waltham tied Haverhill and beat Fitchburg, two of the leading football teams in this State. Newton has not met many teams outside of the games scheduled with league teams but far outclassed all seven league elevens.

This fray can be termed rightly a battle of lines. Today's melee sees the two best lines in scholastic circles clashing. Newton has won the majority of its games because of the superiority of its first defence. This fact alone spelled defeat for Malden last Saturday. Waltham has a strong defence.

Much is at stake for both teams. Newton aspires to clean up all opposition that lays claim to the New England title. Waltham does not intend to play in any post season game but nothing would please Coach Jack O'Leary more than for his team to win over Newton.

Bad weather last week was a hindrance to the practice sessions of both teams and as a result many scrimmages were passed up for skull practice and signal rehearsing. Yesterday, despite the rain, both teams went through a light scrimmage with both doing considerable kicking to give the players practice in handling a slippery ball.

Coach O'Leary had his second team fumble a lot to size up the speed and ability of his men. The double lateral forward pass used by Newton with considerable success was tried out by the second team. Although not so cleverly maneuvered, it served its purpose for, after two or three trials, the first team overcame the interference that Coach O'Leary had mapped out to break up the play.

Providence, Nov. 19.—The biggest home game of the season will be played this afternoon on Andrews Field when Brown will meet Colgate.

The last time Colgate appeared here Brown won and Colgate hopes to win this game. Both teams are fairly evenly matched and both have heavy lines and fast, hard running backs.

Brown finished its heavy training Wednesday, going through light practice Thursday and Friday.

Danvers, Nov. 19.—Rindge Tech defeated St. Johns Prep in a dual cross-country run 47 to 64. Dunn of St. Johns was first, Foss of Rindge Tech, second. The winner's time was 20 minutes 50 seconds, over a three and one-half mile course.

Concord High will play Wellesley High, on the Concord Center playground this afternoon. This will be the first time that Concord has opposed Wellesley on the gridiron for a number of years.

The Concord outfit will probably be handicapped by the absence of its star captain, Joseph Mullaney, who is still nursing a sprained ankle. Concord has worked hard all the week for this contest.

DOUBLE BILL AT FENWAY PARK ON THANKSGIVING

On Thanksgiving Day at Fenway Park the Pere Marquette team will meet the Fittons of East Boston. When these teams played, the Fittons had the best of the argument, defeating the South Boston team 6 to 0.

As an added attraction, Frank O'Neill's Burrell A. C. has been booked up to meet some strong team, probably the Steam Rollers of Providence. This game is a feature in itself, as O'Neill's team figure that they have as much of a claim on the State championship as either the Marquette team or the Fittons.

Both games will be hotly contested and the football fans will not want for action.

LIGHT RAINS PREDICTED FOR GALA FOOTBALL DAY

Football fans, give ear. Old Jupe Pluvius threatens to score a touchdown from the clouds today, the gridiron's day of days. Forecaster Smith predicts cloudy, unsettled weather for the day of the Yale-Harvard game and other games looming big in the sport. There will probably be occasional light rains. It will be somewhat warmer.

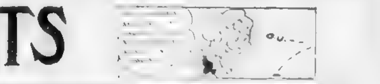
BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS



55,000 JAM STADIUM TO SEE HARVARD AND YALE TUSSLE

a steady flow of humanity Cambridgeward.

Greater Boston residents who were blessed with tickets were somewhat more leisurely, but even they were on hand long before the start of the contest.

Never has there been such a demand for Harvard-Yale tickets. Their purchase, which is confined solely to Harvard and Yale graduates and undergraduates, has found the respective athletic offices forced to limit many of the applicants to a single pasteboard, and while two and [illegible] tickets is the largest number accorded any eligible [illegible].

The public, except for the limited portion that has had opportunity and sufficient cash to invest in the few Stadium coupons which have reached the hands of the speculators, must perforce follow the contest from the press or private bulletins or await the publishing of the late editions of the Boston American.

The 55,000 chosen ones hail from every corner of the continent and some of their number have crossed the oceans to witness today's great battle. Every age and every walk of life is represented in the throng.

Persons high in political, professional and business life, others whose names appear in the limited pages of the Social Register, and some [illegible] who made getting [illegible] support[illegible] the $3 required for the purchase of a ticket.

From early in the week this gathering has been gradually assembling in Boston, filling the local hotels to capacity, or failing to secure such accommodations, have sought accommodations in the homes of friends and acquaintances residing in this vicinity.

The bulk of their number, however, arrived last evening or this morning. Special trains on all roads leading to Boston brought many thousands, while the thoroughfares entering the city have been packed with automobiles crowded to capacity with those fortunate enough to have secured the much sought tickets.

That portion of the throng whose sympathies are with Yale await the contest with enthusiasm far more marked than that indicated by Harvard supporters.

For the first time in years Yale has been conceded a better-than-even chance for victory. With but one break in ten years the Elis have met defeat in this great annual, and the belief that Yale is to come again into its own as an exponent of winning football and gain sweet revenge for the defeats it has sustained at Harvard's hands is the pleasing prospect that Yale rooters entertain.

* * *

But, in the opinion of many followers of the great college sport, a Yale victory this afternoon is far from certain.

* * *

It is true the comparative records made by the opposing teams finds Yale's the more impressive and it is true that in weight, individual ability and in reserve strength the Elis also show to the fore.

But Harvard, owing to injuries, has seldom been able to place its full first team on the field and Harvard has encountered opponents of much more strength than those faced by Yale this season.

Today with all the Harvard regulars in their best condition and possessing the psychological edge that comes from having consistently mastered the Blue, Harvard enters the game with at least a chance for victory, and such a chance often has been turned into victory by Crimson elevens of the past.

The play of the initial period may forecast the final outcome of the game. Each team providing it has opportunity to do so plans to strive for an early lead. The toss of the coin through which is decided the choice of goals may play a most important part in this portion of the fray and any of the usually present breaks, fumbles, misjudged kicks, bad passes, etc., may early in game control its final outcome.

The Yale eleven is generally considered the better defensive team against rushing plays, but it has been palpably weak in forward pass defence. Harvard's record in the latter department is much superior to Yale's, while in the former respect Harvard's showing has fallen far short of Yale's.

Consequently Yale's chief weapon of attack is its off-tackle rushes, while Harvard undoubtedly will place considerable reliance upon forward passes.

In individuals Yale is well equipped to conduct a ground attack.

Captain Aldrich is one of the speediest backfield men in the East, and employs a [illegible] system which enables him to reverse his field once he has reached or passed the line of scrimmage. He can punt, drop-kick and throw forward passes with accuracy, as well as carry the ball and as the result combine the greatly desired triple threat.

* * *

Charley O'Hearn, the Yale quarterback, is another who combines all around ability at advancing the ball, and is more brilliant than his captain in dancing through a broken field.

* * *

Doc Jordan, the Eli fullback, who weighs 195 pounds, is the weightiest backfield man in the game. He hits the line with terrific power and makes interference and forward passes, and in the former respect and in combination with his bulky forwards he should be capable of making counting gains.

Bill Mallory, the remaining backfield man in the first string combination, specialized in interference-making when on the attack, and is employed infrequently in carrying the ball. He is a great defensive back.

In addition to these, Yale has a complete second set of backs whose ability is about equal to that of the regular combination, so that any of the latter may be taken from the game with it noticeably weakening the full backfield.

Yet with all this individual talent Yale has yet to realize fully on its power. The Yale line ends and backs have rarely combined in furthering the carrying back with capable interference, and in many instances the latter's gains have been due largely or solely to his individual ability. It is possible, however, that a vast improvement has been made in developing interference, and if this proves the case, Harvard will be sorely put to check the running game of the brilliant Elis. And, with the running game going effectively and demanding Harvard's chief attention, it will be much easier for the Blue to realize in occasional forward passes.

* * *

With the return to form of several of the Crimson backfield men who have fallen victim to hampering injuries, Harvard is far from ill-provided with pigskin carriers.

* * *

The Crimson's outstanding backfield man is George Owen of Newton. Weighing 190 pounds, Owen has proved himself one of the best line-smashing backs in the East when on offence, and one of the great defensive backs of this section when Harvard [illegible]. In addition he is an interferer, making [illegible] and a punter and drop-kicker of no mean ability. It is [illegible] punting, however, that may greatly annoy the Elis.

Rosie Fitts is Harvard's triple threat [illegible] he is an excellent one. He is the Crimson's best punter, the speediest and most brilliant broken field runner, and a fine performer on either end of the forward pass.

Charley Buell, the Crimson quarterback, is generally considered a [illegible] field general than is O'Hearn of Yale, but does not possess the all-around ability. He is an able forward passer and in practice a good drop kicker, but he seldom has produced field goals in important games. He failed twice last year against Yale and failed again this year against Princeton.

Phil Coburn is expected to start at the fullback post. He is another 190-pounder and is a good man at making interference and on defense a most able performer. He may be employed in relieving [illegible] the latter has been forced to [illegible].

In addition to these Harvard has an excellent offensive [illegible] in [illegible] Chapin, another [illegible] a good triple threat man in [illegible], a drop-kick specialist in Pfaffman and an experienced and [illegible] quarterback in [illegible].

Yale has shown an individual superiority over Harvard at the wings and in the line. Yale's ends in particular have proved their perfection, and their play in today's contest may figure in swinging the battle in favor of the Elis. Blair and Sturm are Yale's first string ends, but Head Coach Charley Comerford of the Yale team has two more sets of wing men of real ability ready to assume the playing role when the occasion demands it.

* * *

"Nemo" Into and Phil Cruickshank, tackle and guard respectively, have proved Yale's line stars in past games. Both tip the scales at 200 pounds or more and should enjoy a weight as well as playing advantage over Tierney and Brown, their respective Harvard opponents.

* * *

Diller, the other Yale tackle, took care of Captain Keck of Princeton despite the fact the Tiger leader outweighed him by fifty-five pounds, while Guernsey, Yale's right guard, has been a steady if not brilliant worker for the Blue. Both, in so far as individual ability is concerned, appear to hold an edge over their Crimson rivals, Kane and Hubbard.

Landis, the Yale centre, is 20 pounds heavier than Clark, his Harvard rival, and has a much better record for the season. Both men started the season as second string substitutes, and because of injuries to other more favored candidates or shifts in the lineup which placed such candidates in other positions they have become first string men.

Yale is much better equipped in line substitutes than is Harvard, and should the battle resolve itself into a test of secondary strength the Eli edge would be tremendous.

The Harvard linemen in recent games, have combined in better fashion than the Elis, and the Crimson is counting strongly on such combination work to overcome Yale's individual advantages.

OFFICIALS IN FOOTBALL CLASSIC TODAY ALL WELL-KNOWN STARS

Perhaps the best football players in the Stadium today are the men handling the game. Messrs. Maxwell, Thorpe, Crowell and Bankhart were "mean" players when they were in college, and could easily hold their own with the present generation of players if they were in college-day shape.

Statistics, stories and the like have been typed about the players on both Harvard and Yale, as well as the coaches, so why neglect the officials who have the hardest job in Saturday's game.

They are by name: Robert W. Maxwell of Swarthmore, referee; Thomas Thorpe of Columbia, umpire; W. J. Crowell of Swarthmore, field judge, and G. Norman Bankhart of Dartmouth, linesman.

Maxwell, called "Tiny," probably because he is anything but that, is the most impressive official on the gridiron today, a worthy successor [illegible] glory that was Bill Edwards' [illegible] the business of ha[illegible] huge tax receipts in the New York revenue district lured him finally [illegible]

Maxwell [illegible] probably of being the only [illegible] official who ever drew a cheer all his own from a football crowd, [illegible] College having honored thus this massive referee last Fall.

As might be guessed from his build, "Tiny" played guard in the days [illegible]

He made [illegible] two seasons.

* * *

From Chicago Maxwell headed eastward and in 1905 he was the bulwark in the line of the best team Swarthmore ever had, and when the All-America free-for-all opened at the end of the campaign he was among the leaders.

* * *

Norman Bankart doubtless has many a pleasant recollection of his football days at Dartmouth in 1903, 1904 and 1905, but it is a safe bet that his thoughts turn most frequently to that seventh of November, 1903, when the big Green team was [illegible] when his great chance came. Princeton, hard pressed, had the ball near its goal line and Jim McCormick, line-plunging fullback, dropped back of his own line to kick his team out of danger.

[illegible] Dartmouth's [illegible]

The 1904 and 1905 Dartmouth teams each played Harvard a tie game in the Stadium, 0-0 and 6-6 respectively, and on both these outfits, Bankart was a star at tackle.

[illegible] Maxwell, a Swarthmore [illegible] was [illegible] the greatest field goal kickers of his college generation. He first broke into the game in 1902 as a halfback.

The next season he [illegible]

He helped to pin a 2-0 beating on Lafayette and gave Swarthmore a 6-5 win over the Navy by kicking his goal from touchdown while Annapolis [illegible]

Tom Thorpe was doubtless the greatest tackle who ever wore the Blue and White of Columbia. A powerful line plunger and a play smasher second to none, he was an outstanding in the lines that Foster Sanford turned out at Columbia in 1902, 1903 and 1904.

He was a brilliant [illegible]

How Come, Wrinkle-Proof!

Wrinkles have been running good neckties for forty years. The fuzzy, flannel linings did it. But now—now America's largest neckwear-makers have invented a new method of cutting and folding fine materials to make better ties without any lining at all—no lining to shrink, wrinkle, roll, bunch up, or get stringy with use. The new tie is called Wearplus—

The Tie Without Lining Padding or Wadding

That's "How Come!" Wearplus ties [illegible] knots tie neatly—firm, fashionable knots. But they don't hold every wrinkle or lose their shape. They wear longer—look better.

A year later perhaps—press them out! [illegible] is good as new again—in a moment!

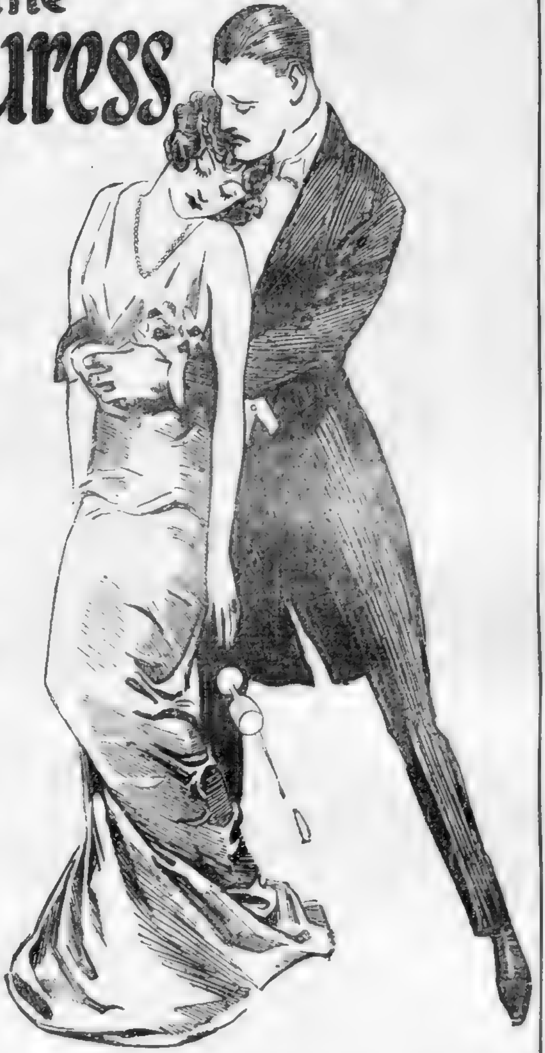
Tragic Suicide of the Adventuress



"Count Gregory" Reveals How His Wicked Scheme to Debauch His Pretty Accomplice Fattened His Own Pockets, but Led to Her Destruction

By "Count Gregory"

(From Next Sunday's Advertiser)

I REALIZED that I must be careful to see that it did not become gossiped about that "the Princess" was engaged in flirtations or intrigues. If I wanted it believed to be true, as I pretended, that here was a royal member of the Austrian nobility, it would spoil the whole fiction to have it whispered about that she was behaving in a very common way with rich men.

So when I found that the wealthy bank president, Mr. Hardy, was now completely infatuated with Alma, it became very important for her to protect her good name in every way while we were securing all that could be squeezed out of this rich old admirer

Banker Hardy seemed to have less discretion than a man of his millions and position should have had.

Each morning on his way to his offices his motor car must draw up for half an hour at the home of the "Princess." At noon his chauffeur must bring him to the house that he might lunch with his charmer. He left his office regularly at 3 o'clock each afternoon Until 4 or perhaps a little later his motor again stood in front of her door.

It had been a part of my agreement with Alma that she was not to spoil our plans by becoming infatuated with any of the men with whom I brought her in contact. I am satisfied this is the sort of a promise no man should exact of a woman and depend upon.

"Count Gregory's" Wicked Partnership Which Filled His Pockets but Ruined Pretty Alma Hayne

Alma was young; she became popular; she was the toast of many young men, some rich, some poor, but all impressionable.

Then there came across our path a young Yale student, Donald Shields Andrews, son of a Cleveland (Ohio) mine owner. Young Andrews was a senior at Yale, and spent his week-ends in New York. I forgot who it was who brought him to Alma's home, but she was smitten by him at once—and with him it was a case of love at first sight.

I warned her one evening after one of her closest friends, young Barney Shaw, whose home is on Fifth avenue, left her in pique because she had slighted him for Andrews. But my warning fell on deaf ears. It was not long before I saw that she was rapidly falling deeply in love with the young Yale student, and that perhaps this time I would not be able to bring her back.

By this time she had brought to my pockets, I am sure, not less than $100,000. Rich men seemed to vie with each other in giving her presents. After a while we made no effort to turn the jewels showered upon her into cash—I allowed her to keep them. But I could see that Banker Hardy would not survive another such blow as had been her temporary elopement to Bermuda.

Alma, too, was tiring of being tied down to this old man. She wanted something of the freedom that youth demands. I began to believe it was time to end the relations with Mr. Hardy and look to other sources of prosperity. Alma agreed with me readily that it would be well to dispose of the banker and thus release her for more satisfactory endeavors. But before we let him go we agreed that we would make one last squeeze for a good round sum.

I had at that time a very good friend—more or less a confidant—a young lawyer who owed his social position and professional successes to my interest in him. This was J. Campbell Thompson, quite well known later as a horseman and society favorite.

Acting under my thoughtful advice, Alma one morning picked a violent quarrel with her old admirer, the banker, and sent him away very angry. She then hurried down to Lawyer Thompson's office and reported to him. I sat in Mr. Thompson's office while he telephoned to the banker. "I am J. Campbell Thompson, Mr. Hardy," he said over the wire, "and I am representing Mrs. Alma Hayne. I believe it would be advisable for you to come down to my office immediately. I have a very insistent client here, a Mrs. Alma Hayne, who seems intent on bringing an action which I think should be avoided."

The banker understood. I think, perhaps, he had undergone similar experiences before. In twenty minutes he walked into the office, very nervous, very excitable and very meek. Alma sat in an inner room. Mr. Thompson escorted Mr. Hardy into still another room. Shutting the door, the lawyer, coming directly to the point, said:

"Mr. Hardy, we could talk this matter over for two hours, and at the end of that time I would have said but one thing—and that one thing would be that my very unreasonable client insists on having $100,000 in cash to-day, before the bank closes, ——"

How Mrs. Thomas Reformed Her Husband

"Stand still!" shouted Mrs. Thomas (Whack!) "You're going to get the whipping of your life. I'll teach you to run around with another woman's husband! (Whack!) Somebody neglected your early education and I'll supply the deficiency now! (Whack!) Scream, yell, holler all you want to! (Whack! Whack!) The next time you meet my husband George, remember this afternoon gathering Fall leaves in the wood! (Whack! Whack! Whack!) Or any other woman's George, or whatever his name is! (Whack! Whack! Whack! Why Rich Girls Leave Their Homes

"The lure of the city accounts for why the working girl leaves her tenement home or the stage-struck young miss seeks a movie career. And the sad reason why the farmer's daughter disappears a few months after the young city visitor has been a Summer boarder at her home is well understood. Some girls, of course, leave home because they are wilful and rebel against the restraints of conventional society—headstrong young women who are willing to take the consequences of their folly. But when the rich and fashionable girl disappears there is an entirely different reason—"

Stocks Irregular in New York; Market Firm at the Close

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

Congratulations to the president and governors of the New York Stock Exchange.

I learn authoritatively that the extreme interest both of the stock exchange and investors. The exchange's advertising regulations were drawn up in the days of the Spanish-American War. The world has moved quite a bit since then. Advertising has become a tremendous vitalizing force in marketing both merchandise and service.

* * *

So crippling were these achromatic regulations that members of the exchange could not compete with non-member investment firms in building up business through advertising. Indeed, the express purpose of these rules was to rob advertising of every iota of "pulling" power.

The consequence has been that non-member investment firms, trust companies, banks, etc., have been able to develop an immense amount of business which could have been successfully competed for by stock exchange firms but for the strangling regulations. Moreover, one reason why so many outside brokers and promoters have been able to recruit so much business is that they could and did employ attractive, appealing advertisements.

* * *

The exchange, I understand, will still closely supervise the advertising used by its members. But an announcement of a welcomed modification of this policy will shortly be officially published, and from what I gather, the step taken is calculated to prove of far-reaching importance to stock exchange members—to say nothing of newspapers and periodicals which feature financial and business news and advertising.

Merger of the Pullman and the Haskell-Barker companies, now under negotiations, may inject fresh vigor and enterprise into the Pullman people. Any one who has occasion to spend nights in Pullman sleeping cars will agree that it is time improvements were introduced. The company apparently has been content to go on year after year turning out the same old type of sleeping berths. Blame monopoly for this—chiefly. The head of the Pullman Company, Robert T. Lincoln, is one of the old school executives.

* * *

Although the American people are intensely interested in everything associated with the history and activities of Abraham Lincoln, how many of them know that every progressive publisher in America has sought to induce Robert T. Lincoln to write either an article or a book about his historic father. But with not the slightest medicum of success. Lincoln's son will not utter a single sentence about his father. I am told that he evinces instant and intense displeasure when broached on this subject. So far as knowing the man who could give the most intimate picture of President Lincoln will go to his grave without uttering or leaving behind him one word in this regard—Robert T. Lincoln is seventy-eight years of age.

Next to obtaining the son's reminiscence of President Lincoln, the most interesting thing to get would be his real reason for adopting his policy of absolute silence.

John D. Rockefeller hopes to be able to tell, from experience, how to live to be a hundred. A friend who recently played golf with him says the octogenarian played the nine holes of his Tarrytown course in 36. That is better than the majority of golfers half his age could do. Mr. Rockefeller's mentality, this friend told me, is as keen as ever.

From a speech made to steel men last evening by Charles M. Schwab: "If the armed protection of our country is necessary, the establishment of which I am the head, will devote itself with all its energy to providing means for the protection of this country's homes and families, but I say to you from the bottom of my heart that if the statesmen now assembled in Washington under the far-sighted leadership of our President and Secretary Hughes should find it possible to bring about disarmament and permanent peace, gladly would I see the war-making machinery of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation sunk to the bottom of the ocean."

Bravo!

From Chicago a friend, L. B. Moses, sends this: "An incident has just come to my attention illustrating the methods of oil stock salesmen, and it occurs to me that it may interest you. A few weeks ago a death occurred in the family of one of the young men in our office, his wife's mother. In the course of time notice was given through the regular channels, showing payment of her insurance policies, and within a few days thereafter this young man's brother-in-law received a note written on very good-looking personal notepaper, indicating no business, merely giving the name of the writer and the address of his office—the note reading as follows:

"'Dear Mr. ....: I shall appreciate it if you will kindly call me up the phone after 9:30 in the morning. Sincerely, (Signed) .... Ask for Mr. ....'

"This is about as near grave-robbing as I have heard of since the old days when the book agent used to go around two days after the funeral and deliver the family Bible, which the deceased had recently contracted for. What do you think about it?"

The same as every decent reader will think of it—wicked.

TRADERS TAKE TO CHEAP OILS

Market Active for Week-End Session; Steels Decline and Rails Are Steady

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York all the morning and changes were mostly fractional. Pierce Oil was an ealy feature and opening sales of 4,000 shares were at 12¾ to 13¼, the latter figure being a high for the year. Other highs for the year were made by Middle States Oil, Phillips Petroleum, California Packing, American Telephone, and Delaware and Hudson. United Fruit sold at its highest since new stock was distributed. Trading attention was largely directed toward low-priced oils. They ruled higher at the start but in the second hour several eased off through profit taking.

High-priced petroleums had a rather heavy tone. Metican Petroleum, however, showed a small gain most of the time, while Royal Dutch and Pan American had a downward trend. aiRls were fairly steady during the first hour. In the second they sold a little lower. Steels had a strong start, but weakened. Equipment followed them downward. Sugars had a good tone and tobaccos improved. Motors were quiet and irregular in price movement, while tires had a tendency toward a lower level. Little was done in coppers, but they were firm. Shipping shares reacted from Friday's highs. The stock market was active. The 5 1-2 per cent. call rate held over until Monday. Foreign exchange rates were irregular as to changes.

Among strong issues at the close were Retail Stores and Punta Alegre. Final gains ranged from fractions to about two points. Among weak stocks were Davison Chemical, Crucible, Marine preferred and Pullman. They were down from one to two points. The New York bank statement showed $5,533,780 decrease in surplus reserve.

MOST BOSTON STOCKS CLOSED WITH GAINS

While the Boston market was irregular all the forenoon, most of the local leaders were up at the end. American Telephone, which advanced a point to new high for several years, was the feature. Boston Elevated and West End sold at new 1921 highs. Edison rights sold the highest price they have yet reached. Packing issues, coppers and New England rails had a better tone. United Fruit sold up to 123, a gain of 1⅜. Calumet & Hecla was unusually active and advanced ten points. Punta Alegre advanced more than two. Boston & Maine A and B issues were up a point. Edison reacted 1½ and Ahmeek and Massachusetts Gas sold a point lower. The market was active and had more than usual breadth.

CURB WAS WEAK.

The curb market had a weak start and grew weaker. At the close Alpha was off 3 cents at 24 cents, Bagdad 1 cent at 3 cents, Daddy 3 cents at 9 cents, Mutual 2 cents at 48 cents, Ranier 3 cents at 6 cents and Iron Cap ⅛ at 7. Boston & Montana, Eureka, Ruby and United Verde Extension ended unchanged. Curb traders took profits.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Conflicting influences were present in Friday's stock market and price swings reflected the same confusion of sentiments that has been such a marked characteristic of recent sessions. Before the opening quite a number of bearish opinions were in circulation. These were based chiefly on the rejection by the House of the President's suggestion for a 40 per cent. maximum surtax and adoption of the 50 per cent rate. In addition to this the appearance of counter demands at the disarmament conference gave less encouragement for the speedy adoption of a concrete program. Considerable interest also was attached to the address of Judge Gary before the American Iron and Steel Institute, and the portion of the speech that seemed to be most impressive was the statement that while steel orders had doubled over the recent low rate, the profits were still little or nothing.

IN spite of reactions here and there, the market gave an appearance of firmness and, in many cases, strength. Marine preferred ran up sharply on reports circulated, but later denied, of large payments by the Shipping Board. Among the oils, the Pierce Oil issues were strong. Chesapeake & Ohio advanced in response to the dividend restoration, and various specialties ran up sharply. Among these were Davison Chemical, United Fruit, American Tel. & Tel. and Federal Mining & Smelting preferred. Crucible acted the best of the steels, largely as a result of the helpful statement issued by the president of the company.

LITTLE attention was paid to the further gain in the Federal Reserve ratio, which brings the figure up to the new high of 71.8 per cent. Increased deposit liabilities are offset by a gain in gold holdings and a comfortable reduction in note circulation.

RESUMPTION of dividends by C. & O. were rather clearly indicated by Thursday's action in the case of Hocking Valley. Announcement, therefore, that the directors had declared a dividend of 2 per cent., payable January 3, 1922, to stockholders of record December 2, merely came as a confirmation of recent hopes. President Harahan said: "Business with the C. & O. is improving. Of course the coal business is adversely affected just now by the mild weather and also by the heavy purchases made last month in anticipation of a possible strike. The average, however, for these two months is satisfactory, all things considered."

FURTHER reductions in railroad rates will be postponed by the carriers until these are warranted by wage reductions. At least this is indicated by the announcement from the Association of Railway Executives. At the same time railroad management holds forth a most tempting inducement for wage cuts to be sanctioned by the Labor Board in the form of rate reductions that would aggregate about $300,000,000 annually in addition to the $55,000,000 resulting from the cut in grain rates.

U. S. INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL responded to the announcement of the passing of dividends by a break of three points, thus indicating that the action of the directors had not been fully discounted. In view of the business depression and the effects of prohibition on the fortunes of the company, the street is not at all hopeful about the prospects for an advance in the stock.

ONE of the strongest issues was International Mercantile Marine preferred, which advanced more than four points on the reports that payments aggregating $26,000,000 by the Shipping Board were under favorable consideration. A quietus was given to these rumors by officials of the company, who said that except for a relatively small balance, International Mercantile Marine had received payment on all its claims against the government. This announcement caused a moderate setback from the high, but the stock came back rather strong on the close, probably on professional short covering.

THERE was further selling of Ajax Rubber on reports that the company contemplated a bond issue to take care of bank loans maturing in December. Some reports place these obligations as high as $5,000,000, but the aggregate is believed to be somewhat less than this. Those in touch with the affairs of the company say that, while it is earning practically nothing, production is going ahead on a satisfactory scale, and fairly good sales are being made. The company has no funded debt, and aside from its bank loans, its finances are said to be in good condition.

FRIENDS of Baldwin Locomotive were encouraged by the statement of President Vauclain to the effect that the company now has on its books business equivalent to 40 per cent. of its plant capacity, and that the company is expected to go into the new year on this operating basis with the prospect of increasing it later to 75 per cent. October was said to be Baldwin's best month since last May.

A DIFFERENT light was thrown on the negotiations between Pullman Company and Haskell & Barker by an official statement made Friday. Hitherto the opinion has been general that a merger of the two companies had been under consideration. A statement issued by J. S. Runnells, president of the Pullman Company, said: "It should be borne in mind that this proposition is not a merger in the ordinary sense of two companies going into a new corporation. It is our plan to purchase the Haskell & Barker Company and make it a part of our organization."

BEAUTY BESIDE TRASH MARS ATLANTA

Spillane Points Out Incongruities of Architecture in Fine Southern City

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—In Atlanta there is a stately structure near the heart of the city which tells in chiseled words that it is "Dedicated to the Advancement of Learning." The names of Homer, Dante, Virgil, Milton, Poe and other immortals meet the eye of one who looks upon the noble building.

But directly across the street from this temple of learning is one of the institutions of Atlanta—an alley—a miserable, disreputable smelly alley, with a litter of garbage, old iron, paper trash, foul rags, broken bits of brick and mortar. And alongside this alley is the Hotel Winecoff, the facade of which is quite attractive.

BEAUTY NEAR TRACK.

What's the use of building temples to the advancement of learning if, in a great city like Atlanta, the public tolerates or is wholly indifferent to an eyesore like that alley directly in front of a fine structure dedicated to "the advancement of learning"?

The capitol of Georgia in Atlanta is a noble structure. And yet many of the buildings in the immediate neighborhood are ramshackle and decayed.

Nobody seems to be bothered by this picture, except the stranger who looks upon it with freshly appraising and critical eyes.

Between Memphis and Birmingham it got very cold in the sleeping car, but it was impossible to get any additional covering from the Pullman porter.

In the morning a newspaper man asked the porter what was the reason.

"Boss, sir; I'm sorry," replied the porter, "but we is short of blankets, and what we had wuz occupied."

PULLMAN DISCOMFORT.

The Pullman people got away with things in the South which would bring violent protest in the North. For example:

Between Birmingham and Atlanta on the day train they sell four tickets for one section of a sleeping car. This necessitates two of the passengers riding backward the entire trip—and it is a long trip. Most passengers carry hand baggage—a lot of it. There is no space for the reception of this baggage, so passengers have to put what they can under the seats, in aisles and in the spaces between the seats. When the car is crowded, as is usual now, for travel is heavy, a day coach, which affords racks for baggage, is far more comfortable than a Pullman for a daylight journey.

And yet the Pullman people exact excess fare for the discomfort to which they subject many of their patrons.

And you are expected to support the porters by your tips.

WHEN SHERMAN SAID IT.

It was in Atlanta that the term "War Is Hell" originated. So the Atlanta people say.

Here is their story:

"In 1864, when Sherman captured Atlanta and had his headquarters in the outskirts of the city, officials heard it was the purpose of the Union commander to burn the city.

"The Mayor and a committee went to General Sherman and pleaded with him to spare them.

"There are only old men and old women and young boys and young girls left in Atlanta," they declared. "Our men are all with the army at the front. To burn the city would be a frightful visitation upon us after all we have suffered. It would be hell."

"Well," General Sherman is reported to have answered, "that's what war is."

And Atlanta, the storehouse of the Confederacy, was burned.

New S. S. Laconia for Boston

The new Cunard steamship Laconia, which is nearing completion at Newcastle-on-Tyne, has been assigned to the Boston-Liverpool-Queenstown route and will start on her first voyage from Boston on May 3 next. The original boat of this name was put on the Boston route and was torpedoed off the Irish coast nearly five years ago. She was rated as the finest passenger boat sailing from this port, but the new Laconia will be an even better steamship. It will accommodate 340 first, 340 second and 1,500 third class passengers.

Do not send this in before the end of the Test.

The Boston American $1,500 Name-This-Auto Test Competition is a test of skill and judgment open to every reader.

The pictures of fifty automobiles are to be printed, one each day. Participants are required to identify the makes of the different cars. They also are expected to write a letter, of not more than 100 words, along Walk Right-Drive Right lines.

The Rules of the Test, list of awards and scoring plan will be printed again on Monday.

To Brighten Thanksgiving Day For Disabled Veterans

Major Theodore L. Storey, executive officer at Parker Hill hospital, has agreed to co-operate with the Boston American in brightening Thanksgiving day for disabled soldiers.

The Public Health hospitals in Boston and vicinity will have real old-fashioned turkey dinners and entertainment in the afternoon. This is especially for the boys who cannot leave the hospitals. Many, however, would appreciate a day and evening away from the institutions and the doctors agree the change would do them good.

Miss Lucette Pacquet was the first to respond to the appeal of the Boston American for the disabled this year. She will take six to a big hotel for a dinner party.

Mrs. Edward Nelson Dingley of Washington street, South Braintree, is the second. She not only will have several of the boys as her Thanksgiving guests, but also will include them in her party at the Harvard-Yale football game today.

A 'phone call for Major Storey, Brookline 7400, will work wonders in bringing Thanksgiving gladness to disabled soldiers.

NEW COMMITTEE FORMED TO AID MURPHY

"clean administration of the city's affairs," was organized today to promote the candidacy of John R. Murphy for Mayor.

Bernard J. Rothwell, former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; Alexander Whiteside, the manager of the campaign made by Mayor Peters, and Thomas J. Mullen, who was secretary to the late Mayor Josiah Quincy, are among the prominent members of the committee.

The following statement was issued:

"The committee regards Honorable John R. Murphy as the one candidate for Mayor of Boston whose high character, demonstrated capacity, thorough acquaintance with every branch of our city government and well balanced judgment afford assurance of intelligent, conscientious effort to carry out a municipal program which this committee advocated.

"It commends his candidacy to every thoughtful citizen and believes that he should be elected by a very large majority. It recognizes, however, that this important result can be accomplished only through the active personal interest of every voter, man and woman, who desires to see the affairs of our city conducted on a plane of strict integrity, sane vision, broad-minded efficiency and with just recognition of the interest of every element in the community regardless of race, color, creed or social position."

The statement filed with City Clerk James Donovan follows:

This certifies that a political committee has been formed under the provisions of Chapter 55 of the General Laws and has adopted the name, Boston Citizens' Committee, with Bernard J. Rothwell, chairman, and J. B. Fallon, treasurer, and the following other members: Alexander Whiteside, Thomas A. Mullen, Samuel Spring, Bartholomew H. Coulg and William J. Fallon; that the purpose for which this committee has been organized is to promote the good government of the city of Boston, and the election and appointment of men of character and experience to public office, and that in particular it stands for the following principles: 1—Just methods of assessing taxes. 2—Wise expenditures of public moneys. 3—Just treatment of municipal employes. 4—The improvement of conditions of our streets. 5—The keeping of our city free from autocratic machine rule. 6—Public improvements tending to promote the growth of the city and the welfare of its people. 7—The safeguarding in Boston of those principles of democracy for which our country contended in the Great War.

TURKEY BUYERS TOLD TO WAIT TILL XMAS

If you can afford only one turkey this year, wait for Christmas. For Thanksgiving they will be scarce and high.

This opinion and advice was given today by officials of the State Food and Drug Division of the State Department of Health, after a talk with the marketmen.

Corn, for fodder, is cheap this year, it was said, and the farmers are keeping their turkeys and fattening them for Christmas.

The first of this month there were 176,424 pounds of turkey in the storage warehouses of the State. A year ago there were only 29,304 pounds. Dr. Herman C. Lythgoe, the division director, said today the figures are not so imposing as they look. The turkey in storage is about 1-22 of a pound for every person in the State.

Enough turkey comes into the market in the holiday season to make the present storage figures dwarf into insignificance, it was said.

Cold storage figures have taken a marked drop, Lythgoe said. On November 1 there were 41,497,333 pounds of foodstuffs, or 15,815,599 pounds less than a year ago. Lamb took a tremendous drop.

The butter storage was 3,535,400 pounds less than the average for five years, and egg holdings totalled 2,968,665 dozens less than the average for five years. These holdings of November 1 were today announced by Dr. Lythgoe:

	1921.	1920.	1919.
Butter (lbs)	14,221,228	19,174,779	16,525,092
Eggs (doz)	9,946,170	9,789,960	11,889,730

Beef (lbs)	4,215,264	4,157,564	no data

NEW BEDFORD WOMAN URGES TURKEY BOYCOTT

New Bedford, Nov. 19.—A boycott against high priced turkeys during the Thanksgiving period was suggested to shoppers of this city by Mrs. Joseph Pearson. In a statement issued she called on all housewives of the city to abstain from partaking of the holiday bird unless the price which is said by marketmen will be around seventy cents per pound drops to a price between forty and fifty cents.

MURPHY TO SPEAK AT TWO RALLIES TONIGHT

John R. Murphy will speak at two campaign rallies tonight. He will address, at 8 o'clock, a meeting in his headquarters, No. 110 Tremont street, of active workers in his behalf from all parts of the city. He later will speak at the Gilbert Stuart School, Richmond street, Dorchester, and will be the guest at house parties both in Dorchester and South Boston.

LAST CALL FOR NEW ENTRIES IN TITLE TEST

Final Opportunity to Join Given Tomorrow in Reprint of First Pictures

Your final opportunity to join the Boston American's Book Test, and share in the distribution of $5,000 in 219 cash awards, will be presented tomorrow in the form of a page advertisement in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Last call!

On one page of tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser will be found ALL the Test Pictures up to date. Buy tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser, then and you will have the First Eleven pictures. Get Picture No. 12 in Monday's Boston American.

There will be NO printing of Back Pictures in the Boston American. The only re-prints will be found in the Sunday paper, tomorrow. After tomorrow, the contestant must rely upon the newsdealer. Place a standing order for the Boston American for the full period of the Test and you will have nothing to worry about.

60 PICTURES IN TEST.

This Book Test will consist of 60 Pictures and certain Lists of Titles.

Each picture will represent the title of a book. In reply to many inquirers it may be stated today that there will be SIXTY DIFFERENT TITLES. The same title will NOT be used more than once. In other words, there will be no "repeats." Sixty different titles!

The Test Editor has felt that questions about "repeats" ought not to be answered; that this was something for the contestant to decide for himself. So many inquiries have piled up, however, that the matter was referred to superior officers, with the above result. That's that. No repeats!

Participants in the Book Test will please send nothing in before the close of the Test. Do not send the pictures in day by day. Hold them. Keep them clean. (Note the rule about "neatness"). At the close of the Test, send them in "all together at one time."

LIST OF AWARDS.

To those who send in the largest number of Correct Titles, after the close of the Test, the Boston American cheerfully will pay the following awards:

LIST OF AWARDS.

First award	$1,000
Second award	750
Third award	500
Fourth award	400
Fifth award	300
Sixth award	200
Seventh award	150
Eighth award	100
Ninth award	50
100 awards of $10 each	1,000
110 awards of $5 each	550
Total	$5,000

There may be ties, as there have been in previous tests. Whenever possible, these ties will be settled on the basis of neatness, exact accuracy, spelling, etc. Read the rules on that point. When ties cannot so be disposed of, the tied contestants will receive duplicate awards.

TO KEEP YOU GUESSING.

The Test Editor hopes everybody clearly understands the plan or theory of the undertaking. This artist-man does not mean for one minute that you are going to hit upon his title every day. His game is to keep you in doubt about many titles.

Every day, notwithstanding, the Correct Title WILL appear and CAN be found in the List of Titles printed with the Test Picture.

A new List of Titles may appear at any time. There is no rule by which one List must stand for one week, or for any other definite period. The guarantee is that the Correct Title will be in the List on the same day as the picture.

Three alert contestants now have called the attention of the writer to two occasions on which, they say, the Test Artist appears to have missed his step. These things will be taken up and disposed of finally in this column on Monday. Don't fail to get Monday's Boston American.

GET PAPER DAILY.

As far as that goes, after tomorrow's FINAL printing of the Back Pictures in the Sunday paper advertisement you MUST have the Boston American regularly. It IS true that a copy of any of the Test Drawings—copies of ALL of them, for that matter—will count for as much on the conclusion of the Test as pictures clipped from the paper. These copies can be made easily with tracing paper.

But who wants to go to all that trouble, when the Test Picture can be and the List of Titles can be clipped from the paper in a minute?

Play it safe! If you have not done so already, speak NOW to Mr. Newsdealer. Only a few words:

"I am taking part in the $5,000 Book Test and I want you to be sure and save the Boston American for me every day."

He'll do it!

Rules of the Book Title Test

The Boston American Book Title Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given by this newspaper to its readers who submit the largest percentage of correct titles to the sixty pictures to be published one each day for sixty days consecutively (Sundays excepted) in the Boston American.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The test will consist of sixty pictures, each representing the title of a well-known book, to be printed, one each day, in the Boston American, the first picture on Monday, November 7, 1921.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which may be run by the Boston American will not debar anyone from entering this test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE TITLE to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every title must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American or on a page of some book form of itself, accompanied by the picture furnished by the Boston American, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the participant on each title blank.

Do not send your titles in "list" form, that is, do not write titles under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct titles, awards will be given to the person submitting the nearest correct solutions giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their titles before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your titles from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first titles sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American title headquarters, at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., either by mail or in person within the specified time limit which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be legibly addressed as follows: "Book Title Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., P. O. Box 280," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

As all pictures in the Test will contain written or printed matter, if mailed it is absolutely necessary that the packages be fully prepaid at postal rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse to consider any sets of titles on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no title or answer book to buy. List of Book Titles will be printed in the Boston American. The list appearing will contain among others the correct title.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Book Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose stamped and self-addressed envelopes.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to these conditions that it may deem necessary for fairly and properly conducting the Test, and the decision of the Boston American Book Title Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

'LA GIOCONDA' DRAWS BIG AUDIENCE

San Carlo Company Gives Fine Performance at Boston Opera House

An enthusiastic audience that filled every seat attended last night's performance of "La Gioconda" by the San Carlo Opera company at the Boston Opera House. With the exception of the ballet dancing in the tuneful "Dance of the Hours," in the third act, the performance was very good. The dancing was unusually poor. A group of Boston amateurs could have been obtained who would have given a more creditable exhibition of the terpsichorean art.

All the principals sang well and were vigorously applauded. They were given many curtain calls. Elizabeth Amsden made an unusually good Gioconda. Tommasini sang the role of Enzo, the nobleman, in fine manner. Paggi sang the blind mother's role. Nina Frascani made a good Laura. Joseph Royer filled the role of Barnaba, the spy, most acceptably, while Pietro Di Basi did good work as Alvise.

It is a long time since the S-R-O sign was hung out at the Boston Opera House, but with performances as good as last night's it would be a daily event.

It's too bad the San Carlo company is not going to stay in Boston for a longer visit. Lovers of well-sung opera at reasonable prices will wish its speedy return.

SEVENTH BOSTON SYMPHONY PROGRAM

The program for the seventh regular pair of Boston Symphony concerts to be given in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, November 25 and 26, which will precede the second regular trip of the orchestra, to occupy the following week, Pierre Monteux will conduct Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony in F minor, which has not been heard at these concerts for several seasons.

The other numbers will be the Tragic Overture of Brahms, the Schoenberg's Sextet for strings, "Verklarte Nacht" (Transcendent Night), including three, and the orchestral arrangement which Felix Weingartner has made of Weber's rondo, "Invitation to the Dance."

THURSTON, THE MAGICIAN

Announcement is made that Thurston, the magician, will open a two weeks' engagement at the Selwyn Theatre, on Monday evening, November 28, succeeding Florence Reed, who terminates her engagement at this playhouse on next Saturday evening, November 26.

MUSIC PROSPECT FOR THE WEEK IS BRIGHT

Notable List of Artists Is Scheduled to Sing at Various Concerts

Gogorza—Elly Ney.

In a joint concert in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, November 27, at 3:30, Emilio de Gogorza, the Spanish-American baritone who is one of our singers of the highest and longest standing here, will give a concert together with Miss Elly Ney, the talented pianist who has just come to this country for the first time and will on this occasion make her debut in Boston.

Chaliapine Concert Postponed.

A heavy cold contracted on his voyage to America prevented Chaliapine from giving his concert in Symphony Hall last Thursday. Allowing himself ample time for recovery, he will make his Boston debut instead on Wednesday evening, November 30, in Symphony Hall.

Newman on Canadian Rockies

In E. M. Newman's Traveltalk on the Canadian Rockies at Symphony Hall next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, one looks up and up until the heavens seem to part and the soul to understand the vastness of the world wherein it is set. In a remarkable series of motion pictures and magnificent color views, the entire Canadian Rockies are pictured and their story intimately told. The elite of the traveled world count no journey complete which does not include a sojourn at some of the Canadian Rockies.

Ferenc Vecsey

A few weeks ago, Ferenc Vecsey, the young Hungarian violinist, who is remembered by many in New York, Boston and other cities as a boy prodigy of ten, returned to this country as a mature artist, and impressed his hearers in his several concerts in New York as one of the finest geniuses of the violin now living. He was soloist with the Boston Symphony last week and returns for a recital December 2.

Galli-Curci

Amelita Galli-Curci, the great Italian coloratura soprano, will appear in Symphony Hall in a concert of her own on Sunday afternoon, December 4, at 3:30. This will be her last appearance here this season.

"Damnation of Faust" by Cecilia Society

On Tuesday evening, December 6, in Symphony Hall, the Cecilia Society as newly reorganized and trained under its leader, Agide Jacchia, will repeat its performance of Berlioz' dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust."

The chorus has been further enlarged, and an orchestra of Symphony players will assist, together with the following soloists: Marcella Craft, soprano; Paul Althouse, tenor; Henri Scott, baritone, and Herbert Wellington Smith, bass.

Harvard Glee Club

The Harvard Glee Club, the noted men's chorus which has been trained to so fine a degree of perfection by Dr. Archibald T. Davison, will give its second annual series of concerts in Symphony Hall on the evenings of Tuesday, December 13, Thursday, February 16, and Wednesday, April 12.

Court vs. District Attorney

Difficulties and Dangers of the Assumption by the Court of Control of the Official's Acts

The indictment by the Suffolk Grand Jury of a judge of the Supreme Judicial Court presents some of the difficulties and dangers of the assumption by that court of the control of the discretionary acts of our District Attorneys.

The Constitution of Massachusetts, from which the Supreme Court derives all its powers, provides that the District Attorneys of Massachusetts shall be elected by the people of their several districts. The Supreme Court has assumed in the Tufts case, as we understand it, the power to control the discretionary acts of these elective District Attorneys.

Charges against District Attorney Pelletier involving his discretionary acts have been laid before the Supreme Court in a petition for his removal. By the precedent of the Tufts case, we take it that the Supreme Court will assume jurisdiction to control Mr. Pelletier's discretionary acts. One of those discretionary acts has been the indictment and will be the trial of one of the Supreme Court's own members for a venal crime.

Upon the theory of their own power, apparently set up in the Tufts' case, the Supreme Court assumes the right to control the discretionary acts of District Attorney Pelletier, first, as to his action in causing the indictment of one of its own members, and again concerning his conduct at the trial if he is allowed by the court to try the case. It merely needs a statement of the situation to show its embarrassments.

The only purpose which the people of Massachusetts could have entertained in providing through their Constitution that the District Attorneys should be elected by the people and not appointed by the Governor or by the Legislature or by the Supreme Court was that the people of the State wished to be able to control directly, and not through some intervening agent, the discretionary acts of their District Attorneys, and it is really the genius of our administration of justice that we separate the powers of the court from that of the prosecuting officer. The purpose of this division of power and responsibility is too obvious to need discussion, and our fathers clearly intended to make certain of this division of power by making the District Attorneys responsible to some other authorities than that of the court.

Of course, every officer of the State may be removed by impeachment by the Legislature. This is not an undemocratic power, because the members of the Legislature are themselves responsible to the people at frequent elections, while the Supreme Court is as far removed from the control of public opinion as a public officer can be made.

Repair Leviathan Here

Appeals of Governor and Mayor to the U. S. Government Should Be Echoed by the Whole Community

The appeals of Governor Cox and Mayor Peters to the national government to have the great ship Leviathan repaired in Boston ought to be echoed by the whole community. From every point of view it would be an advantage to this district to have the big ship repaired here. Moreover, the bid which our local government yards made for the repair was lower by hundreds of thousands than the next lowest bid.

We ought to cultivate opportunities to repair ships and to bring ships to our harbor. It means much to us in the direct material increase of business and it means much in its psychology.

Boston once was the great sea port of America. Our tall ships sailing from Boston carried our flag into every port of the world.

Our national industries have become so great that the home market can no longer support them. If we are to continue to prosper we must find foreign markets. It was the foreign market given us by the declaration of war in 1914 that turned us from the soup line to the heights of dizzy prosperity from 1914 to 1920. It is the loss of the foreign market which has reduced us to our present condition. Ships must carry our goods to the foreign market and Boston is as favorably located with reference to the available foreign markets as she is unfavorably located with respect to raw materials in this country. So we must seek compensation by oversea trade and success in that direction will depend a good deal upon the mental attitude which our people take towards ships, ship-building and ship-repairing.

One city makes cotton goods, another makes woolen goods, another makes automobiles, another makes locomotives, another makes machinery, another deals in fish, another is famous for its African trade, another for its Indian trade The difference in the character of their industry or their commerce is dictated often more by the habit of thought—the direction of the interest of the community than by the peculiar material fitness of the community for its particular industry or trade.

So if we think ships sufficiently we may be able to restore our once magnificent fleet.

Men and Women Different

Also Tractors and Automobiles

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

A sculptor makes a statue of a young American athlete, crouching ready to race, and says it proves American men superior to women, in physical development. But it doesn't. You might say that a caterpillar tractor is superior to a touring car in physical development. The question is: "How do you intend to use the machine?"

Man originally was made to fight and carry the burden, while woman produced the human race. It takes one kind of body, with strong muscles outside, to carry a load, another kind to produce within the body a man to do the carrying.

A cannon is necessarily different from the mould in which the cannon is cast. But, no mould, no cannon.

Ever since the beginning, men have been shifting the load, first to the shoulders of women, and more recently to machines. The really interesting thing about the statue of the young American athlete is the fact that the body of man seems to have become effeminate in 2,000 odd years since the days of the real Greek sculptors.

HOW I MET GENERAL FOCH IN 1915

Mrs. Rinehart Guest at His Table in the First Dramatic Winter of the War—Must Not Forget France in Our Solicitude for China, She Says

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Written Expressly for Universal Service. Copyright, 1921, by Universal Service, Inc.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—I met Marshal Foch again after six years.

In that first dramatic Winter of the war, when Paris and London motor buses, roughly coated with gray paint, were still carrying soldiers to the front, when the French army was still wearing its old field uniform of blue and brilliant red, when German observation planes sailed without opposing from the air low over the allied lines, when the first wave of the German advance had just been checked at Ypres and the Marne—I met General Foch.

It is difficult to reconstruct those early days of rapid movement, swift changes. The Germans were hammering at the allied lines day and night, feeling for a weakened spot through which to break. As they attacked, men were rushed from other points to strengthen the threatened section, and contra-attacks were launched to prevent the enemy massing in one place.

Allies Outnumbered

The allies were outnumbered, out-equipped, but never out-fought. The front was a place, not of its later siege warfare, but of rapid movement. Towns were being lost and recaptured over night, services of supply were chaotic and hunger often the rule, and French officers were carrying about samples of a thick gray-blue cloth, which was to be the new uniform.

Into a town near Ypres one day a motor carried an American woman, with a letter to General Foch. The town was old and paved with cobblestones, and fronting the open square was a small double house, General Foch's headquarters. Sentries stood at the door, uncarpeted stairs led up to the offices, and the noise of typewriters, indissolubly connected now with military operations, came through the open door.

General Foch was not there. He had gone out for a few moments.

The American woman, her letter in her hand, wandered around the town and ended at the church, a very humble church. She pushed open the doors and went in—to find the building empty save for a uniformed figure on its knees near the altar.

The uniformed figure was General Foch.

The American woman slipped away, and later in due form presented her letter.

The General's office was a small, bare upper room, overlooking the square. A desk near the front windows, a great map on the wall, a mantel with a clock, three or four chairs—that was all, except for the General himself. He was not a young man even then, but the tragedies of those later years had not yet written the lines on his face that are there now. The smiling and genial Marshal of France, who stood Wednesday night in a corner of the French Embassy, holding a genial court of his own while the line pressed and surged to clasp his hand, is older, very tired and tragically marked by the years since that Winter of 1914.

He was very kind to the American woman. For three days she remained at the small hotel as his guest, spending the days in the Ypres salient and dining with the General and his staff in the evenings.

At a time when Kitchener was discredited from prophesying at least three years of war, Foch put it rather longer. He was supporting the British against Kitchener in the fight for high explosives and he spoke almost with awe of the French seventy-fives. He declared that the Germans were already defeated, since they had planned for a brief war, but that it would take time to convince them they were beaten and drive them out; that the Germans were not fighting against an army, but against nations, to destroy their past, their present, even their future.

Those dinners were the high points in the American woman's day. She could not dress for them, but she could be punctual and ceremonious. And since anything about the world's greatest soldier interests us, it will not be out of place to reconstruct one of those evenings.

The general was living in a small house down the street from his quarters. Some ten minutes before the dinner hour his staff gathered in the little dining room, where a long table was set for twelve and a small table by the window was laid for one. For the American woman made an unlucky thirteenth, and so one officer was detached to eat in lonely state.

The staff remained at ease until General Foch appeared. At the sound of his approach it stiffened, and so remained while he entered, went around the table and took his seat. Then a buzz of conversation, food, and a little laughter, not much laughter.

There was, at that time, one very important movement toward the end of dinner, a ceremonial movement heralded by a slight hush. This was when the soldier-servant entered, carrying a largish American paper box on a tray. The top of the box had been taken off, and revealed to the eye was—blocks of American "fudge." Each person present solemnly took one piece, and the servant retired.

An American girl, unknown to the general, had sent it to him. Miraculously it had survived the mails and been received intact.

No doubt he has eaten most of our native delicacies since he reached our shores, but I sometimes wonder if anyone has thought to give him "fudge."

Dinner over, and accompanied by such members of his staff as were on duty for the evening, he walked back over the rough cobbles, for he choose the street rather than the narrow pavement, to his quarters. Almost always it was raining. The streets were dark and the wind raw with the damp cold of France in Winter. His progress back to his quarters was silent, for already his mind had traveled ahead of him to the work that was to be done. His big blue cape bellowed in the wind, the staff followed in silence, and Foch, head down, went to the business of winning the war.

Soon Comes France

Very soon now France will present her case to the conference. She will tell in imposing figures of her losses and in splendid oratory of her fears and of her needs. It may be hard for us to think back, beyond the victorious France of today to the prostrate France of that first Winter of the war. It is hard to remember early defeat in the light of later victory. It may be too easy to remember China and forget France.

But we must not forget France. The entire movement toward peace is predicated on the resolve that there shall be no repetition of the case of France.

And it is well to bear this in mind. Nations before now have sat in conference with their tongues in their cheeks, or have signed honestly, to turn criminal over-night. There are such things as secret armaments.

And reduction in armament, valuable as it is, so long as it reduces all armament in the same proportion, leaves the ratio of power as before. It is no visible armament so much as the ability to arm quickly that will count now. The dye plants of Europe can also make the poison gas.

The only efficient peace movement of the world will be the refusal of the people to fight wars.

Eminent Diplomat Warns Mr. Harding and Mr. Hughes

By DAVID JAYNE HILL,
Former United States Ambassador to Germany, in New York Tribune.

"WE have seen all the Pacific Islands taken from Germany quietly divided between two imperial maritime powers, without the slightest deference to the wishes or the interests of the United States.

"We find those powers in a military alliance in which each binds itself to make war in common wherever its associate is engaged in war.

"We find one of them, under this protection, claiming a supreme and exclusive economic control over important and vital parts of the Chinese Empire. We learn of the construction of a new naval base at a point imperiled by no conceivable enemy.

"We are recommended to forego the fortification of any of the islands possessed by the United States on the ocean pathway to the Far East.

"When we open the map of Asia and regard it as a whole we discover that from Constantinople to Kiao-Chau there is not one nation that is capable of resisting the will of this imperial alliance. Empires have vanished from Europe, but Asia has become the joint possession of the two survivors in the world.

"Has America any interest in this?

"Yesterday we were raising armies to combat imperialism.

"Today we are assigning to an imperial alliance, if it is to endure, twice the naval strength which we shall possess, or in any contingency may be allowed to possess.

"If the existing order is unchanged the United States is renouncing its leadership and putting it into the hands of maritime powers that may at any moment declare a zone blockade on the Pacific Ocean that would shut off our trade with the whole continent of Asia."

Rise on Your Toes to Greet the Morning

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

Do you get up grouchy and grumbly, or do you wake to consciousness every morning as though trailing clouds of glory?

No mock piety will here be commended to you, with stolid repetition of set prayers. No, indeed! but a glad and grateful greeting of each day—joy in just being alive, and appreciation of the chance to rise again to Opportunity.

If that is not your state of spirit and your habit of mind and your conscious custom of expression, then you would better proceed to acquire it!

Your life, which must somehow be lived, is more worthwhile if lived as becomes Man, the Master: with confident challenge and with quiet jubilation!

Heavens, no—not with new gibberish and jargon replacing the old, meaningless formulations! Perhaps not at all with spoken words, but, in any case, with your glorious soul on tip-toe to greet the Day!

Why should you be sullen until you have had your bath or drunk your coffee? Why be a bear and growl, until your paw and maw have pounced and fed?

Spirit First

Let your SPIRIT come first to life—superior to paunch and paw—and let it front the world of spirit in strong and joyful fellowship!

What if the struggle has been sterner and the strain more severe than usual! All the more reason for asserting your strength and your mastery.

Perhaps, your purse is fairly flat and your vitality seems too low to meet the much-too-high cost of living. All the greater need to draw on THE INEXHAUSTIBLE RESERVOIR WITHIN YOU!

A tipple is denied you, and drugs you despise, but the invigorating tonic of your own soul is yours for the using. Better than coffee and solids is its refreshing preparation for the day's work!

For your own good, therefore, you would be wise to cultivate the habit of a word with yourself, before you begin the mechanics of dressing and feeding.

Incidentally, if you have indulged in the cussed and too common custom of frowning or grumbling or growling before your breakfast, you may as well surrender this silly self-indulgence.

Even before you look into another glass, FACE YOUR MENTAL MIRROR WITH A SMILE; as one who is on pretty pleasant terms with himself and, therefore, pleased to meet himself once more.

Your honest self-acquaintance will not let you fall in love with yourself, but, if you are at all decent, it will allow you to pat youself in self-encouragement to live today even more bravely and beautifully than yesterday.

Perhaps, you are willing to say something like this: Now I wake and get me up. Before I dress and drink my cup, I greet the Day, salute my Soul, I'll do my task, play well my role!

On the Heights

Something like that. You can invent your own salutation to the morn—and to yourself.. Or you need SAY nothing; but make sure that you SEEK YOURSELF ON THE HEIGHTS, for at least a moment, before you come down to earth and to your usual associations.

So you will be more fit for publication than if you had not taken this private spiritual tonic. And others will be at least as pleased to see you as you have been to see yourself again.

By no means wait until you leave the house. But wear your shining morning face to happify your household and all the members of your intimate circle.

And please do not accept this suggestion as an invitation to go about irrationally grinning, or indulging in the inane slang of saying that you are "fine and dandy," or foolishly singing that all is right as right can be!

No, this is meant to be a sane and feasible request, perfectly in harmony with science and spirituality, designed to help you to acquire a dependable self-starter for every day and its work or play.

As surely as health tones your body, YOUR WAKING SALUTATION TO YOUR SPIRIT will attune you to the day's doings and the universal life.

A day thus started is likely to court success and to close in a strong self-respect and modest self-approval.

Suppose you try it tomorrow, and then for endless succeeding tomorrows!

Have your soul stand on tip-toe, to greet gladly the Morning which You will make good!

SEEING A THING THROUGH

You have been very enthusiastic about a certain project, but you see something more interesting to you ahead and you want to drop everything, and at once.

When you find difficulty in extricating yourself from the mesh of circumstances you get very restless and do not do your best.

You are not a good soldier, morally, if you do not stay to the finish.

Your undertaking is larger and more far-reaching than you supposed when you undertook to put your resources back of it, but that does not excuse you for dropping it because you are tired.

Every enterprise entails a moral obligation, and the higher your moral sense the greater your value in a big undertaking.

It is easy enough to jump into things, but how do you stick?

It is the one who will stick and help to keep things moving who is really an important factor in a business, no matter what the nature of the venture, always supposing it to be a worthy one.

You may have jumped into something unthinkingly, but when you find yourself, rise above everything and fight it out to a successful finish.
